WEATHER INDICATIONS.

U. S. Department of Agriculture,
Weather Bureau,
Toledo, Friday, March 11.

The local forecast for to-day is: Warmer with snow flurries.

For Saturday, fair and slightly warmer.

For Sunday, warmer with light rain in the afternoon.

Weather Conditions.

The storm which passed over us Wednesday is still central in New England and is creating heavy gales in that section. It will pass off and produce or rather continue the cold weather in the St. Lawrence, and slightly reduce the rising temperature of the lower lakes. Another storm center is appearing over our northwest border and has the usual warm wave accompaniment; the temperature has risen 40 degrees at Bismarck and 20 to 30 degree rises are common.

The "high" or clearing area which was central over southern Dakota is now central in the lower Mississippi valley and covers the country from Lake Superior to the gulf, and from Nebraska to the South Atlantic states. Its northern crest separates the two storm centers referred to above. The character of Sunday's weather depends upon the movement of this "high." The lowest temperature is reported from the upper lakes. The Canadian side has a zero temperature; the highest temperature is 48 degrees in Montana. The cold wave has reduced the temperature at Galveston and New Orleans to 40 degrees. The coldest at Toledo was 14 degrees. Total melted snow Thursday amounted to .01 inch.

TEN LONG YEARS

Behind the Cruel Prison Bars

Will Maitland Moreland Have to Serve

On Account of His Letter Writing Mania.

The Blackmailing Oxford Tutor Sentenced.

The Prisoner, Sixty-five Years Old, Wrinkled with Time and White with Age, Breaks Down and Sobs Like a Child.

London, March, 11.—Maitland Francis Morland, of 23 John street, Oxford, 65 years of age, and described as a tutor, was to-day sentenced to ten years at hard labor for attempting to obtain from Lord Hothfield the sum of seventy pounds and other moneys by false pretences.

Morland is a silver-haired, sanctified looking old gentleman, who has been engaged in a peculiar and novel system of blackmail by getting noblemen into a compromising correspondence with a beautiful woman who never materialized, and then adding to their aggravation by extracting, or attempting to extract, the sums of money for the surrender of the letters written to the imaginary person.

Quite a number of noblemen appear to have paid sums asked for, amounting to from fifty to one hundred pounds or so in each case, rather than be bothered by the scandal. Lord Hothfield would not pay but placed the matter in the hands of his solicitors.

The affair came to the knowledge of Mr. Labouchere, the editor and owner of Truth, who published an article, calling attention to the new system of blackmail under the shadow of Oxford University.

A great sensation was caused, and the authorities were compelled by public opinion to take up the case, the result being the arrest and prosecution of Morland.

The prisoner looked his age. His hair and whiskers are as white as driven snow, and though he has a ruddy complexion, the lines in his face are deeply cut by time. He was plainly and comfortably attired in black clothes, white shirt, black silk tie and dark gray vest. He stands about five feet five or six inches and his general appearance is that of a professional man of the old school, and of good position.

From the statement in behalf of the treasury it appears that Morland, personating a Mrs. Maitland, wrote Lord Hothfield, asking for at first £50 and then £70, offering his lordship the pleasures of her occasional society in the character of a young widow, tall and graceful, with a perfect figure, and features like the Princess of Wales, with a competent annuity, and a house large and well appointed in the best part of Oxford.

The first letter was received so long ago as 1888, and a second somewhat later. In July, 1891, a third letter failing to bring the £70, the prisoner began an action for this amount, but discontinued int when Messrs. Lewis entered an appearance to the writ which was actually taken out, promising to proceed in a county court.

It would appear from a mass of papers seized, when the prisoner was arrested, that similar operations had been attempted with Earl Russell and other persons of title, even to the insane step of taking out legal process.

Among others whom Morland attempted to blackmail were Earl Russell and Lord Ormsby. Earl Russell appears to have paid some money but to have refused to pay more. Morland was also indicted for attempting to extort money from Earl Russell.

When Morland was called upon to answer the indictment to-day, he snivelled in a hypocritical fashion and pleaded guilty to the charge of attempting to obtain money by threats, and not guilty to some other charges.

Mr. Gill, who appeared for the prosecution, spoke of the enormity of the prisoner's crimes, and of the necessity of stamping such foul methods as they deserved.

The prisoner was represented by Mr. Paul Taylor, who argued that Morland suffered from an inexplicable mania for writing letters. When asked what he had to say, Morland began to sob. He said that his wife and daughters were innocent of any complicity in his course, and that no woman was involved in his schemes.

"I ask your lordship," he cried, "to be merciful to me in my old age, and to deal with me so that I may die in the arms of my family. May the Almighty be equally merciful to you on the day of judgment."

The judge, in passing sentence, said: "The offense to which you have pleaded guilty makes you liable to penal servitude for life. The enormity of your crime is increased by writing to the wife of the man from whom you were endeavoring to extort money."

The judge then delivered the sentence of ten years' penal servitude. Morland wept like a child as he was removed by the warders.

HAS ONE-THIRD INTEREST

In a Husband She Wants to be Freed From.

Mormon Groesbeck Did Not Keep Faith With the Government and Will Get Into Trouble.

New York, March 11.—A special to the Sun from Denver says that Nicholas Groesbeck, a prominent Mormon, who was convicted once of polygamy, but was pardoned by the president on his promise to obey the law, has not kept his faith with the government.

His third wife, a pretty woman of about 30 years of age, has confessed that the situation has become intolerable to her, and she has begged her one-third husband to leave her.

She recently became a mother. Groesbeck is reputed to be worth $500,000.

TO MURDER HER CHILDREN.

Deeds of an Insane Brooklyn Woman.

Timely Arrival of Police Officers Prevent the Enactment of a Terrible Tragedy.

Brooklyn, March 11.—Mrs. Mary Pachus, who lives with her husband and four children in the top floor of the three-story tenement house at 202 Johnson avenue, Brooklyn, E. D., became insane and told her husband that God had commanded her to destroy the children.

Her husband prevented her from molesting the sleeping youngsters, and toward morning she grew rational.

After he had gone to work, however, the mania again overtook her and she prepared to carry out her murderous intentions.

Seizing the smallest child, she carried it to an open window and thrust it outside, holding it by the legs.

The shrieks of the frightened little one attracted the attention of passers by. The frenzied mother appeared ready to let go her hold at any moment, and paid no attention to the warnings shouted up to her from the sidewalk.

Policeman Candidus of the Stagg street station soon arrived and took in the situation at a glance. Instructing several men to catch the child if the woman should drop it, he rushed up the stairway, burst into the Pachus apartments and seized the child with one hand and the maniac mother with the other.

After a fierce struggle the policeman overpowered Mrs. Pachus and took the child away from her. Then some of the other tenants who had crowded into the room pointed to bloodstains on the floor and declared that Mrs. Pachus must have murdered the rest of the family, but a search in the adjoining bed soon revealed the three children huddled together in a corner and bearing the marks of rough treatment. They said that their mother had abused them during the morning.

Mrs. Pachus fought wildly when Candidus and several other policemen undertook to remove her to the station house. They finally had to bind her with ropes. At the office of the charities commissioners she was pronounced insane and an ambulance conveyed her to the Flatbush asylum.

HE STANDS BY IRELAND.

The Pope and the American Archbishop.

He Is Very Popular at the Vatican.

Text of the Article That Has Attracted So Much Attention in the Religious and Political World.

Rome, March 11.—The following is the text of the article in the Osservatore Romano, the papal organ, sustaining Archbishop Ireland:

"Some German and Italian liberal papers have tried to find in the writings and acts of Archbishop Ireland support for their ideas and doctrines.

"They pretend that the distinguished American prelate disagrees with the vatican on the most important question now agitating religious and civil society, and they publish extracts from an oration which they pretend that Archbishop Ireland delivered in Baltimore in 1889, claiming to see therein an attack on the temporal power of the pope.

"These newspapers deceive their readers; perhaps they were deceived themselves. The words attributed to Archbishop Ireland were the fictions of a Protestant writer in the Pall Mall Gazette in December, 1889, who reported Archbishop Ireland's speech with the addition of his own fantastic comments.

"Continental journals translated the article, ascribing the whole of it to Archbishop Ireland. It is the question which is the more wonderful—the bold effrontery, or the surprising folly of such journals.

"If they wish to know Archbishop Ireland's real sentiments toward the holy see and its independence, they should read the remarkable speech which the archbishop delivered at St. Paul, Minn., on the occasion of the jubilee of his holiness, Pope Leo XIII.

"The speech bears evidence of having been entirely a spontaneous effusion of the heart, without the pressure of any interests upon the speaker, and it is only truth and justice, moreover, to Archbishop Ireland, to say that he energetically supported the beautiful and strong resolutions adopted in Baltimore in 1889, in favor of the temporal power.

"The facts abundantly prove that there is no more ardent or more zealous defender of the pope in America and none more devoted to his sacred person, or more desirous of supporting and promoting the views of his holiness, than Archbishop Ireland.

"What Archbishop Ireland is attempting to do in the United States is to render more popular the lofty policy which Pope Leo seeks, with such wisdom and prudence to carry out in Europe—the policy of peace and conciliation."

INNOCENT MAN SENTENCED.

Served all But Two Days When Released.

Injured While in the Prison He Will Sue for Heavy Damages at Once.

Beatrice, Neb., March 11.—A case of peculiar interest and one seldom equaled was made public here yesterday through a decision of the supreme court.

About two years ago, R. C. Childs, of this county, was convicted and sent to the penitentiary for two years on a charge of grand larceny.

Wednesday, after long delay, the supreme court reversed the decision of the lower courts and Childs was brought here by Warden Malone. The case against the prisoner was nollied and his release ordered.

Childs had but two days of his sentence uncompleted when his release came and the probable effect is exciting considerable comment.

During his incarceration, and while being worked on an ice field, the prisoner sustained a broken leg which, it is claimed, crippled him for life. This last fact will be made the basis for a suit for heavy damages against the prison contractor. The outcome of the case is being closely watched.

A LIFE BLOTTED OUT.

Kate Smith, Once a Belle, Ends Her Days of Unhappiness.

Cincinnati, O., March 11.—Kate Smith, once a belle of New Albany, Ind., committed suicide last night on the Monon train which left Louisville at midnight, by taking a dose of poison.

When the train reached New Albany she was writhing in agony, and it required three men to hold her. She was removed to a physician's office, but died at 3:15 this morning in spite of the doctor's efforts to save her life. About two years ago she made the acquaintance of a Cincinnati drummer, who induced her to come with him to this city. After accomplishing her ruin he deserted her.

SCOTCH ELECTION.

London, March 11.—The election at Kirkcaldy, Scotland, is progressing quietly. The borough is overwhelmingly liberal and would be certain for the party but for the fact that there are several candidates in the field.

This has greatly complicated the situation, and makes a unionist victory possible.

TEN FEET OF SNOW

Piled Up Throughout New York State.

A Howling Blizzard Blocks Travel.

Wind Blowing Fifty-two Miles an Hour.

People Frozen to Death in the Northwest.

Telegraphic Reports Show the Storm Now Sweeping Through the East to Have Been the Most Severe in Years.

Oswego, N. Y., March 11.—The blizzard has placed a complete blockade on this town. It began yesterday at 4 o'clock and has steadily increased in violence. No trains or mail have arrived here today.

Railroad cuts are full to the top and there are immense drifts in the principal streets, some of which are fully ten feet in depth.

Railroad men can make no headway against the storm and the locomotives are blocked in the roundhouses. The wind has been blowing 52 miles per hour and the thermometer is down to 19.

At Watertown.

Watertown, N. Y., March 11.—Blizzard weather has prevailed here and throughout northern New York since 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Two feet of snow have fallen. The thermometer has fallen from 40 above at the beginning of the storm to 17 at 9 a. m. to-day and is still falling. The barometer is rapidly rising.

The wind has made drifts from six to twenty feet deep. Highways are impassable and no trains are running. Many school districts are closed, and sugar-making and lumbering are at a standstill.

At Rome.

Rome, N. Y., March 11.—A howling blizzard is raging here. A foot of snow fell during last night and more is coming. The wind has driven the snow into huge drifts and travel is almost suspended except in the business streets of the city.

Frozen to Death.

Manvel, N. D., March 11.—Thomas Nugent, aged 65, the oldest settler in this vicinity, returning from Grand Falls on Tuesday night was overtaken two miles from here by the storm.

He was found yesterday frozen in his wagon.

The horses were both dead.

At Grafton, N. D., a man and his team were frozen between that place and the depot of the Great Northern railway.

Blown Ashore.

St. Louis, March 11.—The steamer Crystal City reached here late last night, 12 hours behind time. While coming up the river during the heavy gale Wednesday night the steamer encountered a veritable hurricane opposite Kidds Landing, about 125 miles down the river.

She was blown broadside on the east shore, and struck the bank with a shock that caused a panic among the passengers. The crew quieted the excited passengers, but the boat was forced to remain in her perilous position until morning. She was then gotten out into the river and the journey resumed. Very little damage was done.

Business Blocked.

Auburn, N. Y., March 11.—The worst blizzard experienced for years struck this city early yesterday afternoon, and has continued with increasing violence up to noon to-day.

Business has been almost entirely suspended in the streets on account of the blinding snow and piercing cold. The wire system of the electric light, telephone, electric railway and fire alarm telegraph have been greatly damaged.

Auburn is completely hemmed in by huge snow drifts, and all traffic with the outside world has been suspended.

The 6:50 westbound passenger train on the Central road reached here an hour late this morning, and attempted to continue the trip, but was stalled in the country seven miles west of here.

An extra locomotive was sent to assist the passenger train back to Auburn, but at 1 o'clock it had not returned or been heard from.

The eastward bound trains are all stalled at small way stations west of here and it is feared that much suffering among the passengers will ensue. All efforts to render them aid is so far abortive.

The Lehigh Valley road also has several passenger trains stalled a short distance in the country and relief trains are trying to go to their assistance. Twenty-two inches of snow has fallen since the storm commenced.

Many May Have Perished.

Utica, N. Y., March 11.—A furious blizzard has been raging here since last evening. Traffic is stopped and business on the streets almost wholly suspended.

Fears are entertained here for the safety of three carloads of colored men from Tennessee who went north yesterday en route to Dr. Webb's railroad in the north woods. From Lowville they are transported 40 miles in sleighs.

They were thinly clad and if the storm overtook them in the woods while en route they will suffer fearfully.

At Fonda.

Fonda, N. Y., March 11.—A genuine blizzard is now raging in this section. The snow is drifting in banks and seriously blocking the roads. The wind at times is at hurricane speed, carrying with it thick clouds of blinding snow. The temperature is making rapid descent and the fury of the storm appears to be increasing.

STOLEN BY TRAMPS.

Thirteen-Year-Old Boy Kidnaped in Pennsylvania.

Nothing Has Been Seen of the Lad Since His Mysterious Disappearance February 22.

Shamokin, Pa., March 11.—Frank Strausser, the thirteen-year-old son of Capt. F. D. Strausser, has been missing since February 22, and the police throughout the state are now being notified to look out for all tramps having a boy of his description in their possession.

It was supposed from the first that he had been kidnaped or lured away by the tramps, but it was hoped that by keeping quiet some overtures for his return would be made. No word having been received, the matter is now placed in the hands of the police.

At the supper table on the evening of February 21 young Frank told his father that a man had during the day put the initials "F. S." on his arm and he could not wash them off. Mr. Strausser found that his son's arm had been tattooed.

He learned also that the man was one of a number of tramps who had for a week been camping in an abandoned mine opening on the outskirts of town.

Cautioning Frank not to go near the tramps again, Mr. Strausser left for Pittsburg as a delegate to the Grand Army encampment.

On his return, three days later, his wife and daughter tearfully informed him that Frank had not been seen since Washington's birthday. Capt. Strausser consulted with the police, and it was then decided to keep the matter quiet for a time.

The boy is described as having very light hair, blue eyes and a freckled face.

Capt. Strausser is a leading republican politician here. He is only in moderate circumstances.

NO USE FOR BUNCOMBE.

The Guardian Hopes Salisbury Will Agree to the Modus Vivendi.

London, March 11.—The Bering sea question continues to be a leading topic of discussion.

The Manchester Guardian (independent) in an editorial, derides the claim of a mare clausum. It expresses the opinion that a majority of Americans desire a just settlement of the Bering sea question and that they do not agree with the tone adopted by Mr. Blaine. The Guardian says that the America of Adams and of Lincoln is behind Mr. Blaine in his course.

The Guardian hopes that Lord Salisbury will agree to a modus vivendi, with the view of appealing to the sound sense of the American people.

SAVED HIS NECK.

Paducah, Ky., March 11.—Bud Anderson was to hang at Benton, Ky., to-day, but the court of appeals has granted a stay of execution. Anderson, a friend named Lucy Roberts, and his wife stood near while he shot to death Peter McCain for alleged slander of Mrs. Anderson. The Roberts woman goes to the penitentiary for life.

HARD LINES FOR HASTINGS

The Court Passes Sentence of Five Years

For Stealing Fifteen Thousand Pounds.

He Was Trusted by the People and in Turn, Robbed the Orphans to Promote Private Enterprises.

London, March 11.—George Woodyat Hastings, unionist M. P. for East Worcestershire, was to-day sentenced to five years at hard labor for embezzling £1,500 from the estate of John Brown, of which he was trustee.

Mr. Hastings has tried hard to put the Pelsall Coal and Iron company, of which he was chairman, on a sound financial footing. The meetings of the company for the past year or two, however, have shown a succession of disappointments which have created intense vexation and mistrust in the minds of the shareholders.

Forty thousand to fifty thousand pounds has been stated as the amount of the liabilities outstanding against Mr. Hastings. He had a reputation for commercial probity and financial acumen unsurpassed by any man in the midland counties. The vast experience he has gained as chairman of parliamentary committees, his legal training and the knowledge he possessed of and the part he took in county business, were supposed to fit him above most men for the wise and profitable disposal of trust funds and other moneys.

It is asserted that Mr. Hastings has done an enormous business in this way. Persons, a number of them relatives of his own, have placed large sums of money in his hands and have trusted absolutely to his discretion for the selection of sound and paying investments. This trust he appears to have violated.

To-day Hastings broke down completely and pleaded guilty. No man arraigned at the Old Bailey ever presented a more crushed or pitiable appearance.

He was hardly audible as he entered his plea of guilty to the charge. Several prominent men were present, who spoke of his character, and of his course, as a philanthropist. When asked what he had to say, Hastings with quivering voice, expressed sorrow for his crime.

The judge, in imposing sentence, dwelt severely upon the frauds committed by the prisoner which had ruined four young children, heirs to the Brown estate, whose trustee the prisoner had been, and whose funds he had used to bolster up his private enterprise.

Under the circumstances he felt bound to impose an exemplary sentence, which, as stated, was penal servitude for five years.

The conviction of Hastings leaves a vacancy in the constituency of East Worcestershire. It was a liberal district up to the time of the home rule issue, Hastings himself having been elected as a liberal by a majority of 491 in 1885. He joined the tory Chamberlain combination and was unopposed as a unionist candidate in 1886.

Besides being chairman of the council of the national association for the promotion of social science, Hastings was formerly secretary of the law amendment society and of the national reformatory union.

He is about 65 years of age, a graduate of Cambridge, and a barrister, although not in practice.

AN EXCITED TOWN.

Out Hunting for an Incendiary.

Waverly Illinois, Visited by Flames as the Result of Recent Liquor Prosecutions.

Waverly, Ill., March 11.—On December 25th the west side of the square in this city was burned by an incendiary.

Last night fire was started in Fleming's grocery and before it could be checked had destroyed that building and also the stores of John Shehan, J. A. Woodmansee and T. Meacham.

Druggist Fleming barely escaped with his life, his hair and beard being entirely burned off. The loss on property will reach about $8,000; partially insured.

Yesterday Mayor Wemple received a letter saying: "Stop the Sturgiss case or the town will burn."

The Sturgiss case was a whisky peddling one and the mayor paid no attention to the letter and prosecuted the case.

Last night the incendiary carried his threat into execution.

It is almost known who wrote the letter, and the citizens were excitedly discussing the question of lynching the miscreant.

RUNNING A LINE.

El Paso, Tex., March 11.—The United States and Mexican boundary surveying party will begin its march along the border to the Pacific coast this morning.

The United States force is under command of Col. Harlow and the Mexicans are under Senor Jose Blanco. It is estimated the trip will occupy two years.

ECHOES FROM THE WAR

That Raged on the Texan Border.

Garza's Father-in-Law Makes Complaint.

Captain Burke and His Troops Charged with Gross Brutality to the Prisoners They Had Captured.

Washington, March 11.—Serious charges against Capt. Bourke and his soldiers while engaged in an attempt to put down the so-called Garza revolution along the Texan border have been laid before the war department by Representative Crain.

Alejandro Gonzales, Garza's father-in-law, was arrested in San Antonio a few days ago charged with aiding and abetting the bandit by furnishing him subsistence and horses. Gonzales gave $3,000 bail and tried to lay his case before Gen. Stanley, in charge of the United States troops, but the general refused to hear him.

Gonzales and some wealthy Mexicans of Cain's district prepared affidavits embodying their charges against the soldiers, and sent them to the congressman by R. L. Summerlin, a lawyer of San Antonio.

"These affidavits," says Mr. Summerlin in his letter of transmittal, "contain descriptions of a few of the outrages recently perpetrated on some of our citizens by military despots, Capt. John G. Bourke being the principal officer against whom complaints have been made. I am confident many similar charges can be proved, and I lay this matter before you as the member from the district in which these outrages and wrongs have been perpetrated. Gen. Stanley declines to hear us on the charges and upholds Capt. Bourke, but we trust that you will call this matter directly to the attention of the authorities at Washington and greatly assist your constituents."

Gonzales declares in an affidavit that an armed force of troops arrived at his ranch on midnight of Feb. 17, and after stationing pickets around the house Capt. Bourke arrested him without a warrant. Upon asking to see the authority upon which he was arrested Gonzales was told to "shut up," that Bourke "did not want another word from him."

Later in the day Bourke ordered him to mount a horse, and upon his saying that he could not ride horseback owing to a physical disability, the officer replied, "Then you will have to go on foot." Meantime the soldiers had cut off the water supply of the ranch and prevented the family and servants from going to the well.

Gonzales further swears that on going to Capt. Bourke's tent to ask where he would have to sleep the latter came out and struck him in the face with his fist and continued to beat him until stopped by another officer. Capt. Chase, one of Bourke's aides, drew a pistol from his pocket which he said belonged to Garza and inquired whether Gonzales would "like a dose of it."

The forces of Bourke and Chase took possession of Gonzales' ranch, using his stockyard and appropriating all his hay and fodder.

Rumalada Cadina Saens, wife of a physician living in the county Nueces, deposes that she was awakened one night about midnight by the shouting of soldiers in front of her house and repeated cries of "Open the door," accompanied by the thumping of muskets on the house. She begged the soldiers not to break the door down, promising to open the door as soon as she could dress. But the soldiers would not wait. They broke the door down and entered the room where she and her husband were. The doctor had a sprained ankle and could not get up. The soldiers forced him out of bed and took him out of doors, where they questioned him.

The captain of the troop told the doctor he had come to arrest him because he had heard he furnished medical aid to Alejandra Quinenos when wounded in Garza's skirmish with the troops. The doctor denied that he had seen Quinenos, and the captain replied:

"We don't know whether you have or not, but if I can prove this I will hang you."

The doctor replied that he would be willing to be hanged if the charge could be proved.

The soldiers then rode off, continuing their threats that they would hang the doctor if the charge against him could be proved.

Manuel Cadena makes affidavit to cruel treatment. He is nearly 60 years old and very infirm. He alleges that soldiers went to his house about midnight Feb. 17 and commanded him to get up, hammering with their muskets on his front door. When he opened the door the commanding officer asked where Garza was. Cadena replied that he did not know.

The officer then arrested the old man and his son and took them to camp, when Bourke ordered him to reveal Garza's hiding place. Cadena said he didn't know where it was. Capt. Bourke then seized him by the throat, the affidavit says, shook him violently, drew his pistol and aimed it at his head with a volley of oaths, demanding to know whether the old man would prefer to be shot or hanged.

According to Cadena's statement Bourke then drafted him as a scout and compelled him to run long distances on foot before the mounted troop.

In support of Cadena's statement Dr. F. S. Mendosa, a reputable physician of Nueces county, makes affidavit that he has been treating Manuel Cadena for illness brought on by the brutal treatment of Capt. Bourke and his men. The doctor adds that Cadena is still in a precarious condition.

Justice of the Peace Brasier, of Nueces county, sets forth that Capt. Bourke has made promiscuous arrests of good citizens without cause, following such arrests with acts of cruelty, and permitting indignities to prisoners. Houses have been entered at the dead hour of night, Brasier says, doors torn from their hinges and search made without warrants. Troops have been stationed on private property without consent of owners or authority of law.

"If I were to attempt to mention all the complaints that can be substantiated," deposes Mr. Brasier, "they would cover many pages, as nearly everyone in this section has suffered in some way. Unless these outrages are stopped, so great is the fear and anxiety of the people, many of them will leave their growing crops and starving herds to protect themselves from bodily injury.

"There is already a feeling of unrest and anxiety and now of disrespect towards the United States army in consequence of these outrages. I am credibly informed that some of the spies and scouts of the army are soldiers enlisted in Mexico but temporarily here.

"I further certify under oath that citizens whom I know to be innocent of any crime or participation in the Garza revolution are being subjected to indignities and threats of a serious character, which are no doubt made with a view of extorting self-criminating evidence. The local authorities here are well able to preserve peace and protect our law-abiding citizens but for the interference of the troops."

Representative Crain has asked the war department to give prompt and earnest consideration to these charges. Mr. Crain finds himself embarrassed by the situation in his district. It is estimated that at least 5,000 of his constituents sympathize with Garza.

The district is 500 miles long by 400 miles wide. Mr. Crain says that in one part of it a man must wear a bootomfere, while in the other end he carries a bowie knife.

WORSE THAN THE SAVAGES

Horrible Treatment of a Buffalo Baby.

A Female Doctor Orders the Child Placed in a Cold Room Where It Finally Died.

Buffalo, March 11.—The three months old babe of a man named Carner, of Spring Brook, was attacked last night by diphtheria. Instead of calling a doctor, Carner sent for "Mother" Bronson, a midwife. She told the parents there was no hope of saving the little one, and they might as well put it in a cold room, where it could die easily.

Accordingly, the child was put in a room where there was no fire. "Mother" Bronson ordered all the windows and doors opened so the baby could have the full benefit of the freezing atmosphere, while she and the ignorant parents sat in another room hugging the stove and listening to the infant's plaintive cries.

For three days the child's vitality kept it alive, but it died last night.

HE'S IN DISGRACE.

Criminal Prosecution Stares Mercier in the Face.

A French Canadian Idol Completely Shattered.

Raised from the Ranks of Poverty

He Fell a Victim to Great Temptations.

Over a Million Dollars of the People's Money Has Been Squandered Through the Premier and His Dishonest Followers.

Quebec, March 11.—In the rout of the Liberal battalion there promises to disappear forever from the public stage one of the most important individuals of Canadian politics, the greatest French Canadian politician of his own or of any other time.

Honore Mercier was five years ago returned to power as prime minister of Quebec by the largest following ever accorded to a public man in his province.

Since that period he has been the veritable idol of French Canadianism. He has posed as the champion of the national and religious rights of his fellow-countrymen, and was affectionately regarded by them as un enfant du sol. He had honors without number showered upon him by the vatican, including his creation as a count of the holy Roman empire.

He had before him a career full of promise. Of remarkable ability, and possessed of personal magnetism, he was recognized by political friends and foes alike as the natural leader of his nationality.

He has fallen a victim to over-confidence in his fallen powers, to the temptation of office, to the allurements of pleasure and to the unprincipled conduct of his immediate entourage.

From abject poverty, he found himself suddenly lifted to an equality with the first men of the land, railway magnates, merchants, bankers and manufacturers. State banquets, petits soupers, and other incidents of high life were more than he could stand physically or mentally, or pay for out of his official salary of $5,000 a year.

Recent developments by the royal commission of inquiry have elicited the fact that nearly a million dollars of public money, the property of the province, has found its way into the pockets of the intimate friends of the ex-premier, principally the Langelier brothers and Ernest Pacaud.

Mercier himself bought valuable properties in Montreal, Quebec and elsewhere. He travelled by special trains, entertained like a prince and drove imported horses.

The attention of Lieut.-Gov. Angers was called to the $5,000 robbery in connection with the subsidy to the Baie des Chaleurs railway. Explanations were demanded and a royal commission of inquiry insisted upon.

On the finding of that commission the lieutenant-governor dismissed his ministers, summoned a new set of advisers, and then dissolved the house, sending the members back to their constituencies, thus appealing to the popular vote to sustain him.

Had the popular vote refused to ratify the change the lieutenant-governor would have been driven from office or a deadlock would have ensued. It was a life and death battle.

Mercier and his followers were confident of success to the last. Mercier was the ideal of the people, and though some of them had openly repudiated him on account of the findings of the royal commission, he believed that the masses of the electors were still his friends.

Many of the leading conservatives dreaded up to the very close of the polls yesterday that the racial and religious prejudices of the French-Canadians in the rural districts would blind them to the politicel crime and moral turpitude of their recognized leader.

Their fears were as unfounded as were the hopes of the Mercierites. The habitant seems to have realized that while Mercier was appealing to his prejudices he was pocketing his patrimony, and so he voted to shatter his deceptive idol and indorsed the lieutenant-governor in apparently stretching the constitution to rid himself of a dishonest administration.

The English-speaking Canadians were virtually a unit, and sufficient honesty and independence were shown by "Jean-Baptiste" to more than assist the English voters in turning the scale.

The Mercierite organs attribute the defeat of their idol to the fanaticism of the English-speaking population and the influence of the federal government.

The organs of the De Boucherville government, both French and English, take a broader and truer view of the situation, which is well voiced in the following extract from a leading local journal:

"There is left in the situation hardly one grain of comfort for those who two months ago swaggered through the province in the raiment of millionaires, with equipages fit for princes to ride in, drinking the costliest wines like water and scattering in reckless extravagance the hospitality of feudal barons.

"They and their supply have been cut off together, and in no sense is the victory more gratifying than as a vindication of the honor and reputation of Quebec, a vindication towards which all classes, creeds and nationalities have done their part."

DEATH OF A PIONEER.

Bryan, O., March 11.—(Special)—The funeral of Mr. P. S. Gleason took place yesterday at the family residence, corner of Cherry and Trevitt streets. Mr. Gleason was one of the earliest pioneers of Williams county and has been a resident of the county for 57 years and for the last 26 years has resided in Bryan. Since his early boyhood he has been a faithful member of the Baptist church.

Catch-as-Catch-Can.

San Francisco, March 11.—The catch-as-catch-can wrestling match between Joe Acton, the "little demon," and David McLeod, of Nanaimo, B. C., for $2,100 took place at the new wigwam last evening and was won by McLeod. The first fall was won by McLeod by a half-Nelson hold, time 41 minutes. The second by McLeod by a full Nelson. Time, 23 minutes.

MURDERED IN CHILE.

Consul McCreery Investigating a New Case.

A Sailor From an American Ship Dies From Wounds Received From Policemen.

New York, March 11.—The Herald's Valparaiso correspondent says: Consul McCreery is investigating the case of Carlos Carlessen, a sailor on board the Edward Kidder, which arrived here on February 8 from New York on her way to Antofagasta.

Carlessen was found early on the morning of February 21 lying in the Calle Blanco, suffering from a wound in the abdomen, and in a stupid state from the effects of liquor. He was taken to a hospital, and later in the day declared that he had been wounded by Valparaiso policemen and soldiers. The man died February 27.

The testimony taken by the Chilean authorities is to the effect that a policeman, hearing Carlessen's cries for help, ran to the scene, and was set upon by three men, clad in citizens' clothing, who knocked him down and kicked him about the head.

From the testimony taken by the judge of crimes yesterday, in the examination of some sailors of the vessel with which Carlessen was connected, it appears that Carlessen was in a low grogshop in the same district of Valparaiso where most of the Baltimore rioting took place. He was totally incapable, from drink, of doing anything. Their efforts to get him to leave the place proving unavailing, they left Carlessen seated on a bench near some beach-combers. They were gone about ten minutes, searching for a place to lay their companion, but when they returned Carlessen had disappeared.

Carlessen was a native of Sweden. The Edward Kidder hails from Searsport, Maine.

Consul McCreery has made a demand upon the Chilean authorities for an investigation of the affair.

MUSGRAVE'S SENTENCE.

The Celebrated Life Insurance Swindler Must Serve a Ten Years' Term.

Terre Haute, Ind., March 11.—Bob Musgrave, the life insurance swindler, was taken from the jail, and Judge Taylor overruled his motion for a new trial and sentenced him to the state's prison for 10 years.

When asked by the court if he had anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be pronounced, Musgrave replied: "I don't think it would be any use for me to say anything." Musgrave appeared nervous, and seemed to be laboring under excitement. Sheriff Stout will probably take the celebrated prisoner to Jeffersonville to-night. Musgrave's attorneys will now appeal to the supreme court on the legal points overruled by Judge Taylor, but the prosecution have no doubt that the lower court will be sustained.

FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE.

New Scheme of the Postoffice Department.

Gratifying Result of the St. Louis Experiment.

This Greatest Country on the Globe Promises to Keep on Leading the World in Government Affairs.

Washington, March 11.—The postoffice department has just had reports from St. Louis that the trial of house letter boxes just now getting under way in that city will almost surely prove the feasibility of house to house collection of mails. Similar experiments are to be begun in Washington in a few days, and the best informed postal officials, both at the department and at the city postoffice, believe that the results will be almost, if not quite, as satisfactory as in St. Louis.

These tests are the outcome of examinations made at various times during the past two years by the postmaster-general's commission of some fifteen hundred devices for the delivery of mail at house doors without delay; and, if possible and feasible, and without loss of time or money to the department, for house to house collections on regular delivery routes.

It will be recalled that six boxes out of the fifteen hundred or over were selected for the tests. Of these only three have thus far shown an actual disposition to make the experiment.

One of the boxes, by a Boston inventor, will be tried in Washington, another, by a St. Louis inventor, will be tried in St. Louis; and a third, by a Wheeling inventor, will be tried in Washington as well as in St. Louis.

A detailed report of the exact operation of the trial in St. Louis says that in making preparations for the test of the Wheeling box (the interior collection and delivery box) a circular letter was sent to each resident on the carrier route chosen for the experiment by the postmaster, Major Harlow.

These letters were given to the carriers for distribution at 8 o'clock one morning, and by noon of the same day 25 of the 143 residents had responded in person and accepted the box. They had been requested in the letter to call at the postoffice and examine the box, which by the proposition of the inventor was to be given free of all charge to those testing them—in Washington as well as in St. Louis.

Liberal newspaper accounts of the proposed departure and of the trial brought interested crowds to the postoffice to examine the device. Some two or three hundred persons desired to give orders for the boxes at once, despite the fact that there was as yet no assurance that the complete system would be accepted.

Within five days after the issuance of the postmaster's letter a great majority of the residents of the test route had called at the office and given their hearty consent to having the boxes placed on their doors, and most of those unable to call replied by letter to the effect that they were "greatly in favor of any box that would permit them to post mail at their houses."

It is believed that all of the owners of the 143 residences on this route will by the time the boxes are ready to be put up accept the joint offer of the postoffice department and of the inventor of the box.

A majority of the larger real estate brokers and landlords in St. Louis have requested the postmaster to have these boxes placed on their premises at once, even if they are to be served only as delivery receptacles and to be collected from only when a carrier has mail to deliver.

One land company interested in the laying out of a new residence tract has made every effort to have the system put in force in their district at once, "as a means of inducing the sale and renting of their property."

Maj. Harlow, who has been for the past year leading the people of this city to expect this important innovation which the department is considering, thinks that St. Louis is ready and anxious to accept its benefits at once by supplying its dwellings, stores and offices with these boxes at their own expense, which would be perhaps 75 cents or $1 per box or upwards, as the tastes and pocketbooks of the householders might dictate, the inexpensive boxes, however, always being as durable and as convenient as the more expensive.

"I am quite content," says Maj. Harlow, "that when this test has been thoroughly made (as it will be, under the supervision of this office, in order that neither a strong nor a weak point may be overlooked) it will be demonstrated that collection from house to house, as well as delivery, has come to stay."

The postmaster at St. Louis also advances the opinion that the house to house collection and delivery will afford many other desired facilities, such as ordering stamps from the postoffice through the carrier, by the payment of postage backward and forth, etc., etc.

In Washington, Postmaster Sherwood has similarly issued a circular letter to the residents of two average carrier routes, informing them that each of the two inventors whose boxes are to be tried is willing to put up boxes with the permission of the householders, free of cost for trials like those undertaken in St. Louis; and it is announced that, as in St. Louis, the inventor will personally call upon each householder and exhibit the box, if it is desired.

The object of the department is, of course, not merely to find out whether the door letter box is a popular thing (which it is evidently certain to be, if it combines collection with delivery), but also to determine whether collections can be made on carrier routes, from houses where mail is to be collected on the regular deliveries, without loss of time to the carrier force, and hence without expense to the department.

The inventors who are making the tests bear all expenses themselves upon the prospect, no doubt, that the expected adoption of the system and the consequent sale of large numbers of boxes, even at the low price of say 75 cents to $1 per box, will be profitable enough to make the experiments an object to the successful competitor. The most enthusiastic postal officials have long imagined that if the present loss of time to the carrier force of a given city, a quarter of which loss perhaps is due to waiting at doors for the mail to be taken in, can be done away with, and if a collector can know at a glance from the sidewalk (as he can by means of disks) whether there is mail to be collected or not the process of collection from house to house on the regular deliveries will fit into the process of delivery from house to house without any appreciable friction, delay or expense. It already looks as if this dream of two great added postal facilities frequent and regular collections from every city door, and deliveries to safe receptacles without the annovance of answering bells all without expense, would before long be reality.

A bar to happiness is a bad breath, both in man and woman, and many a good catch has gone a-sailing on account of it. Are you troubled with it? The general cause of it is a disordered stomach; at least ninety-nine cases out of one hundred can be traced to that cause. There is a sure and certain cure. That is regulate your stomach and make it strong and healthy. Nothing will do this so permanently or quickly as the genuine Carlsbad Sprudel Salts. Every drugstore has them. The signature of Eisner & Mendelson Co., N. Y., Sole Agents, will be found on every bottle. Look out for imitations.

CONFLICTING VIEWS.

A Proper Question Answered In a Straight-Forward Way.

The Results of Science, Aided By Skillful, Honest and Methodical Treatment Can and Do Cure Catarrh Completely and Permanently.

"Doctor," said a lady who recently called to consult in regard to treatment, "my family physician told me my catarrh could not be cured. How is it that one doctor says it can't be cured and another says it can Who am I to believe?"

To this lady and to all others whose minds may be vexed with conflicting representations on these questions, Dr. Copeland has this to say: "The strides of science have been so rapid, the additions to our stock of knowledge of the human system have come so fast and are so varied in their character, so far-reaching in their effects, and so subversive of old theories, that it is impossible for any one man to keep up with them all. The family physician is so absorbed with his general work that he has not time to keep up with the rapid pace of science on this great subject. Not having had the time or the opportunity to make a special study of the nature of this disease and trace its many disastrous results; not having the special appliances, the special knowledge, the special skill necessary to success, he naturally fails, and judging by his own crude and imperfect work is ready to encourage the impression that catarrh is incurable. In this way great injustice is often done by keeping persons from applying to a qualified specialist until the disease has spread through and undermined the whole system and a cure has really become impossible, or can only be accomplished after many months of patient and persistent treatment."

In other words, Dr. Copeland and his associates do not charge that the family physician willfully speaks falsely when he says catarrh can not be cured, but that he makes rash statements upon subjects with which he is not sufficiently familiar.

ADDITIONAL TESTIMONY.

An Interesting Statement From a Well-Known Citizen of Toledo.

The statement of Mr. Joseph Harbracht, of 252 Anna street, is of more than usual interest, and for the benefit of others it is given in full, as follows:

"I had catarrh for eight years and more," said Mr. Harbracht, "and suffered all the symptoms of that loathsome disease. My head was stopped up, and I had severe pains over my eyes. There was a continual discharge of mucous into my throat. My throat was very sore as was also my tongue and mouth. They would be raw and inflamed and cause me great pain, especially in eating and swallowing. My ears were affected and I suffered greatly with earache. Both sides of my neck were swollen and sore. When I caught cold, which was often, these symptoms would become aggravated and then my suffering would be so much more. I did not know what it was to get a good night's sleep, and when I got up in the morning I would be tired and worn out and totally unfit to do a day's work.

"For over a month I was so bad that I could not work at all. The disease invaded my whole system and I was but a wreck of my former self. Sometime ago I placed myself under treatment with Dr. Copeland and associates and I must say it was the best thing I ever did. They have made a new man of me. All the soreness has left me. I feel like a different person and I want to tell everybody, who has suffered as I did, the immense amount of good that has been done me. I cheerfully recommend Dr. Copeland and associates. I make this statement of my own free will and do it because I want others to know where they can be benefited. I positively say they have cured me.

SAVED BY A WOMAN.

Her Courage Put Her Husband to Shame.

A Sleep-Walker Rescued from a Perilous Position Three Stories from the Ground.

Plainfield, Conn., March 11.—Mrs. Nellie Maines, a lodging-house keeper in the factory village of Glen Falls, proved a heroine last night.

A lodger who is a somnambulist had climbed in his sleep out of a window and sliding down to the eaves sat with his feet overhanging the sidewalk, three stories below, gesticulating at the circle around the moon.

Mr. Maines declined to crawl down the roof to rescue the man, but his wife was equal to the emergency. She called to her sister: "You hold me and I'll go."

Then she clambered out of the window and carefully lowered herself until she had the imperilled man within reach. She clutched him firmly and clung to him with desperation until both were hauled safely inside the window.

The local brewing firms do not look on the invasion with friendly eyes and one or two have shown signs of war. The result threatens to be a reduction in the price of beer, with a view of freezing out the St. Louis concern, whose beer is gaining a foothold among drinkers here.

How They Differ.

In make up: Most baking powders contain ammonia or alum. Cleveland's does not; not a particle.

It is made of pure cream of tartar and bi-carbonate of soda, with a little flour to keep the strength, nothing else. Cleveland's is wholesome.

In strength: A rounded spoonful of Cleveland's does better work than a heaping spoonful of any other.

A large saving on a year's bakings. Cleveland's leavens most.

In results: Cake made with Cleveland's is fine grained, keeps moist and fresh.

Cleveland's leavens best.

On March 11th, 1874, Charles Sumner died in Boston. The greatest of his orations, a two days' speech on "The Crime Against Kansas," was full of the most withering denunciations. It so inflamed Preston S. Brooks of South Carolina, that, six days later, he assaulted Sumner in the Senate chamber, where he beat him into insensibility with a cane.

TO FORECLOSE MORTGAGES.

Two Cases Filed in the United States District Court.

This morning there were filed in the United States district court two petitions for foreclosure of mortgages. The first is entitled The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. James Deshay et al. The amount is $2,000 and the mortgage is held on land in Adams township.

The second is J. L. Dobson, treasurer of the Haverhill (Mass.) Public Library, v. Anna Rose Leppelman. The mortgage is for $8,000 on a farm of land located near Fremont.

WANTED A WATCH.

He Got It, but He Also Received a Workhouse Sentence.

Thomas J. Madden was tried in police court yesterday on a charge of petit larceny. Last September, on a pretext of wanting to buy a time-piece, he borrowed a watch from A. E. Sipe, a Cherry street jeweler. He did not pay for it or live up to his agreement and it was also shown that he had made false pretenses in obtaining the watch. Yesterday afternoon Judge Sala fined him $50, costs and 30 days.

O. A. WINIFRED MISSING.

He Has Not Been Seen Since Last Tuesday.

The friends of Mr. O. A. Winifred are becoming anxious about him. It seems that on last Tuesday he went home to his dinner, and after partaking of his meal read the newspapers. About 3 o'clock he called at Greene's music store in the Pythian castle and requested that a man be sent to the house to fix the piano. This is the last heard of him.

Mr. Winifred has been with Newton & Carter for eight years, and has had charge of all the financial affairs of the firm. There is no reason for his absence on account of money matters, since his books are in first-class shape. Mrs. Winifred is almost crazed over her husband's absence. It is feared a mishap has befallen him in some quarter. Of course, any information concerning the missing man will be thankfully received.

WORKHOUSE BOARD.

The Monthly Meeting Held Yesterday Afternoon.

The regular meeting of the workhouse directors was held yesterday afternoon. The superintendent's report showed that 48,000 bricks and 14 cords of stone were sold during February. On the former was realized $329.75, on the latter $105.50.

At the beginning of the year there was on hand $2,769.95. Receipts have been as follows: Fines collected, $309; from board of foreign prisoners, $224.90; sale of brick, $7,245.25; sale of stone, $150.50. Balance on hand amounts to $2,939.94. There is about $2,500 outstanding on the sale of brick.

The bills for the month, amounting to $459.26, and salaries to the amount of $647.50 were ordered paid.

The following prisoners were released: Frank Suedeker, William May, Rosa Roth, Margaret Kruse, William Whitman, Charles Dwight, Charles Vokes, J. J. Coffin, August Heidman, Louis Straline, Mike Steinert, John Shaw, Maurice Burns and Edward Elkins.

A PIG AND A HALF.

Geo. T. Clarke, of This City, Has a Curious Porcine Production.

Geo. T. Clarke, of this city, has returned from a visit to Halloway, Mich., bringing with him a curiosity in the shape of a pig which was born Tuesday last on the farm of John Schwab. The peculiarity of this particular pig is that it has eight legs, one head, four ears, two tails. The head and fore legs look natural enough, but just below the ribs the pig branches out into two pigs, male and female, with two sets of hind legs, two tails, etc. Another pair of legs project from the middle of the back, and had this pig lived, which unfortunately it didn't, it would have grown into pigs feet for a whole orphan asylum. It was one of a litter of 15 pigs, 13 of which survive to mourn their loss.

The monstrosity was killed by being stepped upon by his elder pigships, as its numerous legs hampered its movements and it couldn't get out of the way. This all goes to prove that too much of a good thing can be had, and ought to satisfy the man who grumbles because he hasn't got a hand to scratch the small of his back.

AN UP-RIVER RESORT.

The Maumee Valley Navigation Company Secures an Option.

The Maumee Valley Navigation company, through its manager, Mr. Canfield, has secured a 60-days' option on the Peck homestead and property at Perrysburg for $10,000.

The house is a large and commodious one, built by the late Congressman Peck at a cost of $23,000. Five acres of land adjoining goes with the building.

It is the purpose of the company to change it into a summer resort, and there is no finer place on the Maumee. It is delightfully located on the bank of the river. The house is of brick with 22 elegantly decorated rooms, dancing and dining hall and all the accommodations of a first-class residence. The grounds will be fitted up for picnic and pleasure parties.

Mr. Canfield said this morning the company would buy the property and take direct charge of the management.

An adept caterer will be placed in charge of the house, and it will be run in first class style.

The steamer Burt will make regular trips, calling en route for the new resort, Eden Park.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

Various Matters Taken Up at Last Evening's Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Central Labor union was held last evening. The Chinese emigration law was discussed. The period of its enforcement is drawing to a close, and the union adopted a resolution requesting Congressman Haynes to make an effort to secure a re-enactment of the law.

It was reported that the Working Girls' union was in a flourishing condition.

A committee was present representing the upholsterers and carriage makers. They said that their organization would be perfected at a meeting at Phoenix hall Sunday.

A communication from the brewery teamsters was read. They hope to soon bring everyone of that calling into their organization.

Messrs. Robt. F. Booth and Wm. Fellows were appointed to represent the union at the sociologists' meeting at the First Congregational church, March 15. Manufacturers have also been invited.

Albert Albrecht, who was injured in the Labor day parade last fall, was voted $20 to assist him.

The following new delegates were recognized: August H. Kamper and Louis Kissler, from the Tinners' union; Wm. J. Gray, from Cigarmakers' union No. 6; J. H. Schieber, Printing and Pressmen; G. C. Weble, International Furniture Workers.

THE OHIO YACHT CLUB.

Some Matters of Importance Will Come Up This Evening.

A meeting of the Ohio Yacht club will be held this evening. One of the features will be the reading of the log of Captains Purney and Curtis, who have just returned from a trip to Bermuda. Some curious secrets will be given away. It is said, too, that some poetry regarding the officers of the club will be read.

COFFEY AGAIN

In the Toils of the Law—This Time for Pocket Picking.

John J. Coffey was arrested last night on suspicion of having picked the pocket of a man named Peter Tahoe. In police court this morning he waived examination and was bound over to the common pleas court on a charge of larceny from the person with bail fixed at $800. Tahoe is also held in $100 bond as a witness in the case.

BIG REAL ESTATE DEAL

Between the Walbridges—Consideration of $21,000.

Another big transfer of real estate was filed at the recorder's office to-day.

H. S. Walbridge sold to Silas C. Walbridge and Ebenezer F. Walbridge one-half of lot 10 and five feet of lot 100, Port Lawrence division, the consideration being $21,000.

The property involved fronts on Water street, between Adams and Madison, just to the rear of the First National bank.

GONE TO WORK.

Air Line K. P.'s Will Have a Building of Their Own.

Papers of incorporation for the Beatty Lodge Knights of Pythias Building company have been forwarded to Columbus, and the organization will be completed as soon as the proper returns are made.

The company is organized under a capital stock of $10,000.

The object is the construction of a lodge building at Air Line Junction. The structure will be of brick three stories high, fronting on Western avenue.

At the present time over $4,200 has been subscribed. The foundation will be laid as soon as the frost is out of the ground and the work pushed with all possible dispatch.

THE CIRCUIT COURT.

Judge Scribner Again on the Bench—Gas Case Submitted.

Judge Scribner, of the circuit court bench, is able to attend court once more, and the gas bond injunction argument was concluded.

The case of the Consolidated Street Railway company, plaintiffs in error, against the Toledo Electric Street Railway company, was taken up for hearing.

This is the case involving the constitutionality of the appropriations act passed by the state legislature April 11, 1890. Judge Lemmon, of the common pleas court, sustained the law.

BLOODED STOCK

For Toledo—D. M. Harris, of Zanesville, Visiting Here.

Toledo promises to be the Lexington of Ohio with regard to fine horses and big sales.

D. M. Harris, of the Harris stock farm at Zanesville, was in the city this week, a guest of his brother, W. H. Harris.

While here Mr. Harris visited the Ketcham and Newton stock farms, and also arranged to place a number of blooded horses on the list for Newton & Carter's sale to be held in Toledo April 12. The stock listed was as follows: Flora Wilkes, record 2:19 1-4, by George Wilkes, and one filly hrdlaadrdhofwddodod Wilkes; two fillies by Red Wilkes, and one filly by Red Wilkes. Aside from this list over 200 other consignments have been made. The sale promises to be one of the largest ever held in northwestern Ohio.

Mr. Harris is a member of the finance committee of the Zanesville council, and while in Toledo he picked up pointers that will be of value in the management of Zanesville municipal affairs.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY.

Anthony Wayne Lodge Celebrates in Good Style.

A merry party gathered with Anthony Wayne lodge, Knights of Pythias, at Pythian Castle, last evening, to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the organization of the lodge.

Committees have been active in preparation for the event for several weeks, and as a result over 500 guests assembled and were entertained in a most royal manner. No pains or expense were spared to make the occasion one of the most successful of the season, and it certainly was.

Mr. Samuel Clark directed the program in a pleasing manner as master of ceremonies.

After an overture by the orchestra, Mr. L. G. Richardson, in a very neat address, bid the guests welcome and extended the hospitality of his associates to all present.

Miss Carrie Beatty and George W. Stevens sang a duet, which was received with hearty applause, and in response Miss Beatty sang a solo.

William Beatty then spoke of the record of Anthony Wayne lodge in the past decade, and gave the body due credit for its progressive qualities under adverse circumstances.

Miss Nettie Wolfman recited a humorous sketch in a most artistic manner, which called forth repeated applause, and the little lady was compelled to respond with another.

The address of the evening was made by Hon. J. W. Winn, of Defiance. His subject was "Open Secrets," and his exposure of the inner workings of "the lodge" was humorous and highly entertaining. He related incidents of the "ante-ups" and downs, the "highs and lows" of secret organizations, as well as personal experience of the reception of a married man on returning home next day after "lodge." This experience was not only confined to himself but that of another brother knight was graphically portrayed to illustrate the good accomplished by Pythianism.

A song by Mr. Stevens concluded the regular program, and the silent drill by Toledo Division, No. 35, Uniformed Rank, under command of Capt. J. Austin, jr., was the next feature of the evening. The movements were executed to perfection at the sound of a piano. The boys have been carefully drilled, and will doubtless win laurels in the military field.

At the close of the entertainment a splendid supper was served. Dancing and cards were indulged in until a late hour. The committees who arranged for the reception appeared in last evening's issue.

Fishermen to be Paid for the Nets

That Were Confiscated by Warden.

The Woman Sufferage Bill Placed on the Shelf—More Bills Made Laws—General Capital Gossip.

Columbus, March 11.—(Special)—The house committee on fish culture and game left this morning for Port Clinton, where they will take the testimony of some fishermen whose nets were seized and sold under a law which has been declared unconstitutional. The committee is accompanied by Representative Heinlein, who was invited to accompany it because of his being a lawyer.

On April 15, 1889, a law was passed taxing fish nets used in Lake Erie, or Mercer or Licking county reservoirs, from $2 to $5 each, and under that act $6,499.75 taxes were collected. The law was declared unconstitutional, and on April 28, 1890, an act was passed providing for the return of the taxes.

But a number of the seines had been seized and sold by the game warden for non-payment of the tax and last May the legislature authorized those whose nets had been sold to sue the state for damages. The suits were brought, and recently Representative DeWitt introduced a resolution, which was adopted, directing the committee on fish culture and game to investigate into the amount of damages sustained by those whose nets had been confiscated, and report to the general assembly, with a view to relieving them of the trouble and expense of a suit by passing a bill making an appropriation.

Bills Passed Senate.

Mr. Geyer (by request)—To authorize the village of Spencerville, Allen county, to issue $10,000 in bonds to encourage manufacturing if approved by two-thirds of the people.

Mr. Flummerfelt—To authorize the township trustees of Scipio township, Seneca county, to transfer $300 from the soldiers' monument fund.

Mr. Flummerfelt—To authorize the commissioners of Seneca county to issue $15,000 in bonds to build a bridge across the Sandusky.

Mr. Boesel—To change the name of Celia Groch, of Anghaize county, to that of Fredericka Wilhelmine Dierker.

Woman Suffrage.

The Doty female suffrage bill was expeditiously put to sleep in the first round yesterday, and will be heard from no more this session at least. It was a special order for 11 o'clock in the forenoon. At that time the house was engaged in the ripping business as applied to the city of Dayton, and so Doty's bill was allowed to go until afternoon.

The author then called the bill up, and asked that it be referred to the standing committee on privileges and elections. His motion was opposed by Mr. Beard, who thirsted for gore, and wanted to kill the bill at once.

Mr. Beard declared that the ladies had been kept in suspense long enough; that the bill was as dead as Sterrett's doctor bill, and that its demise should be formally announced so as to relieve the ladies of any further anxiety.

Mr. Doty's motion to refer, however, was finally agreed to by 42 yeas and 37 nays, and the bill was referred to the elections committee, where it will peacefully slumber away. Doty says he will make an effort to revive it next winter.

Contested Elections.

The house committee on privileges and elections yesterday afternoon submitted reports on the two contested election cases. In the Frasure-Paxton case, which comes up from Clermont county, the committee reported unanimously in favor of seating Paxton (democrat), who at present occupies the seat.

In the Rowlen-Weybrecht case, which comes up from Stark county, the four republican members of the committee submitted a report in favor of seating Rowlen. The three democrats of the committee will submit a minority report in Weybrecht's favor. Both cases have been made a special order for next Wednesday at 11 o'clock.

Ohio in the Bounty Business.

Mr Carney injected the tariff idea in the house this morning through a bill to provide for the encouragement of raising sugar beets and other sugar plants. It provides that there shall be paid out of the state treasury a bounty of one-third of one cent a pound upon each and every pound of sugar produced in this state from beets or other sugar-yielding plants; also a bounty of two-thirds of one cent for all sugar produced from beets or other sugar-yielding plants that have been grown in this state.

In order that the bounty may be secured the sugar raised must contain not less than 90 per cent. crystalized sugars, the quantity and quality to be determined by the secretary of state with whom all claims must be filed.

The secretary is authorized to visit in person or by representative the factories where the sugar is manufactured, and has authority to make full examination of quantity and quality of beets used in the production of sugar from beets or other plants.

After the sugar has been examined it will be branded by the secretary of state, on which shall be stated the kind and quantity of sugar in each package.

If any factory has an output of 4,000 pounds a day there shall be appointed by the secretary of state a resident inspector, who shall receive 25 cents per package inspected, but the fees shall at no time exceed five dollars a day, and this inspector must give a bond of $2,000 for the faithful performance of his duty.

All fees must be paid persons claiming bounty and the secretary of state shall, when all conditions of the land are complied with issue to the claimant a certificate on which the auditor of state shall issue his warrant on the state treasury; no bounty shall be paid before the first of November, 1892.

Confirmation.

The senate has confirmed W. C. Chamberlain, of Summit, as trustee of the Ohio State University, and Dan Milliken, of Butler, trustee of the Miami University. Milliken had been appointed by Campbell and has been hanging fire.

H. T. Braun, of Athens, was appointed trustee of the Ohio University by Gov. McKinley and the senate sent it to the committee on universities.

After An Office.

Mr. Daugherty has introduced a bill amending the statutes so that when any person is holding the office of state commissioner of common schools he is prohibited from performing the duties of teacher or superintendent of any public or private school, or teacher in any college.

This is aimed at the democratic state commissioner, who was elected superintendent of the schools at Hamilton.

Notes.

The committee on sanitary laws and regulations of the senate has recommended for passage Mr. McCune's house bill to prohibit barbering on Sunday.

Mr. Carney's bill requiring that hand rails be placed on stairways in all public buildings, factories and tenement houses, passed in the house yesterday.

The senate judiciary committee has recommended the passage of Spencer's bill to authorize county treasurers to employ legal services to collect delinquent taxes.

The senate confirmed the appointment of C. E. Ink, of Columbiana county, as a member of the state board of pharmacy, and of L. S. Lake as a trustee of the state reformatory at Mansfield.

Mr. Strehli of Hamilton county yesterday afternoon introduced a bill providing for the payment of a license on railway sleeping cars, regulating the fare charged and regulating the method of operating the berths of said sleeping cars.

Senator Von Seggern introduced a bill in the senate yesterday afternoon providing that courts shall always require bonds in matters effecting idiots or insane persons whether wills leaving them property requires it or not.

Newspapers are trying to make a sensation out of a little spat between Mr. Price, of Hocking, and one of his constituents, Roberts, of Lancaster. They called each other liars and passed at each other in J. L. S. style with somebody holding each pugilist.

The senate yesterday afternoon passed Mr. Griffin's bill which provides that counties shall not be compelled to pay costs of litigation in relation to value of stock in railroads organized under the laws of other states than Ohio. The bill requires stockholders to bring suits in the state where the company is organized.

Mr. Meyers' bill requiring that boards of county commissioners shall organize on the first Monday of January is half a law, having passed in the house yesterday.

A bill providing that in each village of justice of the peace shall be selected who shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the mayor in all cases of violation of ordinance, was passed in the house yesterday afternoon.

The bill introduced by Mr. Taylor of Champaign to divide the state into two districts for the inspection of oil was defeated in the house yesterday.

Among the bills introduced in the house yesterday afternoon was one by Mr. Heller of Lucas, which provides that it shall be a misdemeanor to transport loads of 2,000 pounds in vehicles having tires less than four inches in width over gravel, macadam or other improved roads. A penalty of not more than $50 fine or 30 days' imprisonment or both is provided.

CATARRHAL DYSPEPSIA

AS DESCRIBED IN A POPULAR LECTURE

By Dr. S. B. Hartman, at the Surgical Hotel, Columbus, O.

Reported for the Press.

Catarrhal dyspepsia is a disease which, in some degree, effects thousands of people, and the result of chronic catarrhal inflammation of the stomach or duodenum. The catarrhal state may have been brought about by irritating foods or poisons, intemperate use of alcoholic drinks, or catarrh of the throat extending into the stomach. In either case the result is the same, namely, chronic catarrh of the lining membrane of the stomach. This state leads to diminished quantity of the digestive fluids, or else to a vitiated quality of them.

The symptoms of this particular variety of catarrh are more painful and damaging to health than catarrh of any other organ. Food taken into the stomach at once produces pain or heavy feeling. As soon as the stomach is empty there is gnawing pain, accompanied by belching of gas. The tongue and throat look red and angry, with sometimes patches of white coating. The peculiar character of catarrhal dyspepsia, as distinguished from the other varieties is pain; but if it is complicated, as is frequently the case, with the other kinds of dyspepsia, the symptoms will vary. No kind of food agrees with the stomach, but some kinds cause less uneasiness than others. The bowels may be loose, constipated or irregular. The introduction of food into the stomach often causes an immediate passage of the bowels.

For this condition I find Pe-ru-na to be an admirable remedy. In all cases it brings prompt relief to the painful symptoms, and in a large per cent. of the cases it makes a permanent cure. Pe-ru-na soothes the inflamed mucous surface, and thus strikes at the root of the disease. In cases where the inflammation has been so severe and continued as to produce extreme irritability of the stomach, the remedy may be taken in small doses at first, diluted in water; but, as soon as the improvement is sufficient to permit the full dose to be taken undiluted, it is a better way, and the cure is much more rapid. In catarrh of the head, throat and lungs, Pe-ru-na excels all other remedies. There is no other medicine that so perfectly restores the victim of la grippe, either in its acute stage or in its after effects.

A valuable pamphlet of 32 pages, setting forth in detail the treatment of catarrh, coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and consumption, in every phase of the disease, will be sent free to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Co. of Columbus, Ohio. This book should be in every household, as it contains a great deal of reliable information as to the cure and prevention of all catarrhal and kindred diseases.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever see anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

Alger, Blair and Cullom are the a. b. c. in the presidential candidate primer.

Will the opposition please confine its attention to facts about wool just now, not to the campaign theories of the principle of protection?

Query: will the wonderful religious revival in Cincinnati affect the political situation at all, or are all the converted ones women, as usual?

Mr. Griffin's railroad committee keeps jabbing the railroads, but the companies say not a word. They prefer spending their money in the courts.

Chairman Clarkson paying "a splendid tribute" to the political work of Senator Quay is a fine illustration of the eternal fitness of things as they happen sometimes.

Bring Bob o' Lincoln home, put him in the dark republican stable and send Pat Egan to fill out his term. That's a suggestion in teh interest of the country and her seals.

The gas investigating committee found some gas yesterday—plenty of it, in Perry township, and probably enough to knock out the pumping job somebody is trying to foist on Toledo taxpayers.

The Mexican newspapers are agitating the question of putting criminals to death by chloroform or swift poison. The good Mexicans don't believe at all in our method of rapid transit by way of blue lightning.

Ex-Governor Ames, of Massachusetts, fortifies his recent liberal views on the tariff question by quoting from eminent republican authorities, of days not long gone by, which is a very exasperating thing for him to do.

Mr. Reid will have to reform the almost-free-trade sentiments he has been exhibiting in France, when he gets home, or he will scarcely dare sit on a stool in the Tribune office, let alone slipping into a vice-presidential place on the high-taxers' ticket.

The voters in Quebec do not understand how it is that ex-Premier Mercier, who was a struggling lawyer without means six years ago, is now able to live in a magnificent mansion and have a $100,000 bank account.—Exchange.

These things will be understood after Canada becomes annexed.

Perhaps this thought may be of value to those who urge gas pumps to draw on contiguous territory owned by Findlay, the Northwestern and other corporations: what if there shall be reciprocal sharing by retaliatory pumpings, then what? Will Toledo be any better off than now?

Senator McMillan puts a great deal of meaning in few words when he says:

The laborer has been forced to pay more for the roof that shelters him, for the hat that covers his head and the woolens that cover his back. He has had to pay more for the linen he wears, the hammer and hoe with which he works. Yet his wages have not gone up one cent. What benefit has increased protection been to him?

Tomes of brilliant fine-spun theories cannot meet the cold logic of facts.

"Legislation under way to retaliate upon Canada and to provide for the construction of big battle ships." Out upon such blow-hard bluster as this, clipped from a New York administration organ. It is become a wearisome thing, and is the echo of republican politics in Washington. Firmness, fairness, dignity and fight, if needs be, as a last alternative, yes; but this continual Harrisonian strut with a chip on the shoulder simply makes us ridiculous in the eyes of the world. If Secretary Blaine's letters on this question are as weak and ill-advised, as are all his other epistolary performances, perhaps we would better go a bit slow until the whole matter is made plain.

We have been waiting patiently several days for the general uprising of the patriotic protectionists who thoroughly hate England and everything English. There is glorious opportunity for all of them, from Benny I. and Jimmy I. down to the transparency carrier in a republican procession, to call for blood. The Bering sea trouble is the causus belli, and there should be no hesitancy in getting to the front. Never mind the red coats and the formidable navy. Didn't Harrison play Chile for politics and win? What's the poor little fish-worm South American state compared with the present chance to make a war and a political campaign? Of course, on occasion, every American citizen will help whip England, but that time is not now at hand. In the preliminary battle of words and bluster, the English haters of the protection stripe ought to get together, and, at least, resolve something.

THE "CHEAP MAN."

In the campaign of '88, Mr. Harrison said "a cheap coat always covers a cheap man," and Mr. McKinley said "cheap and nasty" go together. Now these high-minded and aristocratic individuals meant to stir the pride of working people to prepare them for an advanced price on woolen goods. The great financier, Jay Gould, understood the situation better than the politicians. He said, "Where a man has bought two coats in a year, he must now be content with one." These aphorisms are quoted direct from the published words of these leaders of party policy. How well did they forecast the future, when added taxation on people's coats, carpets and blankets was to bring them renewed prosperity? The price of raw wool has gone down instead of up. It is printed in official record that the cheap man is multiplying in numbers, as is shown by the deterioration of goods, the growth of the shoddy industry even to an increase in importation of the stuff. In 1860 there were in this country 30 shoddy establishments, with an annual product of 402,590 pounds. The shoddy produced in the United States in 1890 will amount to 100,000,000 pounds, produced by ninety-four mills. The scoured wool produced in that year amounted to only 92,000,000 pounds.

With what kind of a story will they face these "cheap men in cheap coats" in the campaign of '92? They are voters, and the party needs them.

MENTIONED ON THE STREETS.

That Manager Tillotson expects to make the opening of Hotel Victory at Put-in-Bay the event of the season.

That there is not much stock taken in local pugilistic circles over the bluffs now appearing in print between the big 'uns.

That the petition praying the legislature to enact measures to prevent the waste of gas is being numerously signed.

That the C., J. & M. railroad will now start out on a new era of prosperity, having the city's best wishes for success.

That democrats should consult with each other relative to the best men to be named by caucus and convention this spring.

That Louis Steuer's friends are not allowing flies to rest on them in the preliminary skirmish for the street commissionership.

That the enforcing of the card system on buildings the coming season will cause many little spats between employer and employe.

That the Bee's want columns last evening were replete with as much information as could well be crowded into that amount of space.

That the Builders' Exchange directors transferred the responsibility of making choice of a working secretary from their own shoulders to those of Mr. John Stollberg.

That there is no doubt of Governor McKinley's acceptance of the invitation to deliver the address on Memorial day in Toledo. He has more than partly promised to be here.

That the gas investigating committee made a splendid move when they agreed to invite the public to express views on the situation. Those who have opinions should prepare themselves to give them.

Their Only Hope.

The "Blaine boomers" refuse to regard Mr. Blaine's declination as final. According to Washington dispatches they are preparing to hold a meeting to organize for the presentation of his name at Minneapolis. It may require two or three more letters of declination to take the one really conspicuous and able republican statesman out of the way for the smaller men.—Dubuque Herald.

Should Come from the People.

The people constitute the state and should not delegate their choice of the state's representatives at Washington to the members of the legislature. Especially is this true when slightly over one-half the legislature is compelled to elect a senator that a bare majority of a party caucus has selected. The present method is vicious in its every respect.—Buffalo Times.

In Spite of the Czar.

A small tidal wave seems to be sweeping over Maine. Portland, Westbrook, Lewiston, Saco, and other cities elected democratic governments. Between prohibition and McKinleyism, Mr. Reed's favorite stumping ground bids fair to be thoroughly regenerated.—New York News.

Toledo Council Might Profit.

Gov. Flower advised the legislature in a special message that valuable franchises "should not be granted to corporations without adequate compensation." If all reports are true, that's what the legislators think.—Buffalo News.

Foster's Talk.

Secretary Foster hasn't helped his case by asserting that he referred to a certain class of emigrants as "flannel mouthed" instead of "clam mouthed." His little remark to the English reporter will not soon be forgotten on this side of the Atlantic.—Boston Globe.

Don't the Tariff Raise Wages?

Pennsylvania iron barons have begun to cut down wages. The laborers have to furnish, as usual the money this year to run the protection campaign.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

QUAY'S CONDITION.

El Paso, Tex., March 11.—The state capitol building at Chihuahua, Mexico, was partially destroyed by fire Wednesday. The origin of the fire is unknown.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

The Emperor William is getting into a fit state of mind to find pleasant savor in his spring medicine by a study of his portraits as they are dished up in the comic papers.

Mrs. Susan B. Anthony has been immortalized by a souvenir spoon, which bears not only her likeness and name, but also the watchword of her cause—"Political Equality."

William Wirt Henry, of Richmond, is said to be a grandson, though it would seem as if he must be a great-grandson, of Patrick Henry. He is a lawyer and an authority on all matters pertaining to the history of Virginia.

The Duke of Edinburgh is one of the richest members of the royal family, and can make a sovereign go much farther than his venerable mother has been able to do. It is said of him that he never parts with a shilling which he wouldn't recognize if he came across it years afterwards.

Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, has just caught his first tarpon in Florida waters and the local papers contain jocular references to his previous success as a fisher of men. The bishop is one of the most popular of western churchmen, a modified edition of Bishop Brooks in mental and physical girth.

The late Admiral Jurien was noted at the court of Napoleon III as one of the finest conversers in France, and he was always a central figure in the late-surviving salons of those days. He became a member of the French academy, and it has been said of him that he literally talked his way into that society of immortals.

The public portraits of Mrs. Deacon, the unhappy heroine of the Cannes tragedy, recall in a striking way the pictures of Baroness Vecsera, whose love for the Crown Prince Rudolph caused her death. There is a noteworthy resemblance in the shape of the head, the arrangement of the hair, the eyes and the curl of the eyelashes.

PRESSURE VS. PUMPS.

The Mayor's Committee in Search of Information

Visits the Perry Township Gas Fields with Success.

The City's One Well Is a Good One and the Territory Seems to be the Best Yet Struck—The Committee Favorably Impressed.

Messrs. Emmick, Burdick and Romeis were the only members of the mayor's committee that visited the gas fields yesterday, and it was a pity that the full committee did not go, as much interesting information was obtained.

The destination was Norris, a wayside station on the Toledo & Ohio Central, and the object was an investigation of the Perry township gas field. At first it was the intention to go over the entire field in carriages, but the utter impassibility of the roads made this impossible, even if it had been found necessary.

Inasmuch as the city owns but one well in the field it was considered unnecessary to go further than the well. This is located about half a mile from Norris.

Manager Heston and Superintendent O'Herron were on hand at the East Side depot and had charge of the committee's transportation.

Manager Heston did not think the prospects of a dinner were very bright at Norris, so the majority of the committee pocketed a sandwich before leaving and trusted to luck for anything else that might show up.

At Norris the delegation was met by Mr. J. Sterns, who piloted the party through the woods to the Norris well. Mr. Sterns also invited the party to dinner, but it was considered inadvisable to delay if the party would catch the 2 o'clock return train for Toledo.

The city owns the gas right in 1,865 acres of land in Perry township, and taking the well examined yesterday as a specimen, it is first-class gas territory.

Near the depot is a well, drilled for oil, but turning gasser it was turned over to the owner, and is now on the land held in lease by the city. No gas is being drawn from it except that used in heating Mr. Norris' residence. Should the city desire at any time to connect it with the city main line it can do so.

Six weeks ago the well was drilled in and it was registered as having a capacity of 500,000 cubic feet and a pressure of 260 pounds.

Yesterday when the gauge was first applied it showed a rock pressure of 360 pounds—an increase of 100, and a capacity of 1,661,000 cubic feet.

This was a pleasing surprise, not only to the committee, but to Messrs. Heston and O'Herron.

It regained in one minute 145 pounds, and in three minutes it rose to 200. After blowing off for 17 minutes it showed a rock pressure of 210 pounds and a capacity of 584,000 cubic feet. This is about what the well would do if turned into the main line. It is perfectly dry, and is an all around good gasser.

"Is the Northwestern pulling from this territory?" a Bee asked Mr. Stern.

"Yes; the Northwestern and Tiffin both own considerable land in Perry township. The city's land here, however, is bunched, and neither Tiffin or the Northwestern can drain it as is done in the Stuartsville and Bloom township fields."

"Is this considered good gas territory?"

"It is, perhaps, the best in Ohio. Tiffin's wells register about the same in pressure and capacity as that owned here by the city."

"How far is the oil belt from here?"

"About two miles. This was held for oil land, but a trial showed it was much better for gas—in fact there is no oil here at all. I think Toledo has the cream of the gas land in Perry township."

Numerous tests were made on the Norris well, and all proved eminently satisfactory.

"How far is this well from the city's main line?" Mr. Heston was asked.

"About ten miles. With a six or eight-inch main we could reach the main line and supplement the present supply greatly. An eight-inch line would be better. We could put fifteen or twenty wells on an eight-inch all right, and you could not very well on a six-inch."

"How much would an eight-inch cost?"

"About $3,000 a mile. I should say about $50,000."

Speaking on this subject later Mr. Burdick said:

"It strikes me it would be a safer, wiser and more economical way to develop this territory and extend the line out here. Pumps will cost $75,000 or $100,000, and at best they will be simply an experiment. That there is gas here in plenty is evident. The line will only cost $50,000, as compared with $75,000 or more for pumps."

Mayor Emmick seemed also to take this view of it. He is opposed to an extravagant use of the city's money, and if a fair supply of gas can be secured without the use of pumps, then he favors a new line to the Perry township field.

After tramping back to the little shanty —designated a depot—the door of the place was found locked. It was yet half an hour to train time, and it was intensely cold.

The key was found at a farmer's house near by, and a fire was lighted in the discarded stove. The place was just beginning to warm up when the train came along and—it was all aboard for Toledo.

This is the committee's last trip to the field, and it goes without saying that the last was the best.

DRAWING THE LINE.

The Police May Not Turn Out St. Patrick's Day.

Mayor Emmick, Playing Fast and Loose, Leaves It Optional With the Men to Go Out or Not.

Mayor Emmick has been asked by a committee representing a local anti-Catholic organization not to allow the usual squad of police to lead the procession on St. Patrick's day.

The committee say that the mayor promptly granted the request, but in speaking with a Bee he said he had simply taken the matter under consideration, and would leave it optional with the men to turn out or not, just as they please.

The mayor was between the devil the deep sea. He could hardly refuse the request, and yet it would be considered strange, to say the least, if they abolished so suddenly an old established custom.

The devil will be beaten around the bush in this wise. At the next meeting of the police board a resolution will be introduced and probably passed, forbidding the police to take part in any demonstration of this kind whatsoever.

Such a resolution, however, cannot go into effect before March 17, and so the mayor will shirk the responsibility by placing it upon the shoulders of the force itself.

"It will be optional with the men to turn out or not," the mayor said to a Bee yesterday." If any should object then they will be excused. If any should desire to participate, then they shall be allowed to go. Our force is too small now, and it is hardship to require men to work all night and then parade the next day."

"You have been asked not to allow the police to parade, have you not?"

He nodded.

"I don't believe in making flesh of one and fish of another," he said, "and I am of the opinion the police force should not be allowed to take part in any demonstration of the kind, whether it be Irish, German, French or anything else."

It is understood that two members of the police board are pledged to support the aforesaid resolution.

INSANITY OR IMPUDENCE?

The Silver Question.

To the Editor: Under the head —"A Western Man says the Free Silver Agitation is Waning"—the speech of Mr. Louis R. Ehrichs, of Colorado Springs, Col., at a dinner of the Commonwealth club of New York city, has been spread on the wings of the Associated Press reports. The following is the extract reported:

"The free silver movement has, in my opinion, reached its topmost wave of poularity. Give us another year or two, during that time to circulate widely the genuine facts before the people of the west and of the south and in its present form there will be no "silver question." The sentiment should be widely promulgated that if, in the coming contest, either candidate, presidential or vice presidential, has the slightest suspicion of free coinage affiliation, or of any weakness or indecision in that direction, it must be a battle, not of a modified tariff against protection, not of democrats against republicans, but of the sane against the insane."

To the insane all others seem insane. That speech certainly has the sign of insanity. Wise and clear-headed men consider respectfully opinions different from their own. The insane, or bigots only, can think in that strain. I have taken the trouble to write to Colorado Springs to learn who this man is. The following is the reply: "Mr. Louis R. Ehrich is a citizen of Colorado Springs; is a capitalist from New York; with New York views, not Colorado's."

He is probably a money lender with mortgages on his neighbors' property in Colorado. Those who borrow from him support him. If they fail to make a living for themselves in addition to giving him a support, his business is to take in their property and then to find some other parties to work for his support. The single gold basis is assuredly the basis under which money previously earned by somebody, will gather the greatest increase to itself, either in interest, or by foreclosures. It is surely the money lender's basis because it means an increased value to money without effort on the part of its possessor. Unfortunately it means a decreased value of everything else, measured by that money. Money lenders are interested on one side of the question. Pretty nearly all the rest of the people are interested on the other. Even ordinary bankers are in the latter class, for they, too, will profit more by the general prosperity of their depositors than they could lose by a decline in the value of gold. If Mr. Ehrich were agent of the Barrings, the Rothschilds, or of some of the collossal life insurance and other corporate companies of the eastern states which have money loaned everywhere, his interest as such agent would prompt him to work to down silver.

The writer is a life-long republican, and remembers well the supercilicus assumption of the single gold standard advocates (along in the seventies) that gold alone must be the world's coin basis. They rode a high horse and showered down all sorts of epithets on people who differed with them. But when some of the ablest French and Belgian political economists and some of the broadest-minded bankers in Europe pointed out the revolution in all values that must inevitably flow from an abandonment of bi-metallism, public thought was awakened to study the subject, and many of the ablest men in this country threw themselves into the breach to help neutralize the wrong that the legislation of 1873 had done, and would further do. In the congressional sessions of 1877-78 discussion finally concentrated upon what was known as the Bland bill. In the beginning of the session, it is doubtful if the advocates of bi-metallism could have mustered a hundred votes; but after a prolonged discussion the opposition arguments seemed puerile and untenable against the mass of facts and reasoning brought out in favor of a return to the old standard The Bland bill was carried in the house by a vote of 163 ayes to 34 nays, and in the senate three months later by 48 yeas to 21 nays. The aye vote in the house represented 67 republicans and 96 democrats.

The writer believes that a full and dispassionate discussion will bring the same result now. More than this, republican as I am, I believe that if Gov. Campbell had had the courage and ability to have pushed the free silver plank of the democratic state platform to the front in his last canvass, he would have carried the state by the help of republican votes. His canvass was evasive and weak where it might have found its greatest strength —in the simple support of the clear, direct and logical silver plank of the convention which nominated him. Gov. McKinley had unlimited money to draw upon from rich bankers and manufacturers outside of Ohio. Gov. Campbell, (so it seemed to me) was afraid to alienate the same banker class and instead of making a bold and straight-out appeal to the people on the silver issue, halted to secure eastern money aid, and fell between two fires.

The democratic party seems now in a great bother about who can be nominated for president with some hope of success. I venture the opinion that R. P. Bland, of Missouri, could to-day command a heavier vote than any other democrat in the United States!

THE DESTROYER.

About Ready to Test Ericsson's New Boat.

New York, March 11.—The Ericsson submarine torpedo boat Destroyer, designed by Capt. John Ericsson of Monitor fame, is now receiving the attention of the navy department.

Work had been stopped on the vessel for months when she was ordered from the navy yard to Erie Basin, South Brooklyn. A board of naval experts, of which Commander George A. Converse is president, was ordered to conduct the experiments and report upon their success.

The vessel was yesterday placed in the dry dock to have some repairs made to the valves of the submarine guns, after which a series of shots will be fired with dummy projectiles. The gun is 31 feet in length, and is on a line with the vessel's keel. As the projectiles are 27 feet in length they are taken apart and put together section by section as placed in the gun. Twenty-five pounds of hexagonal powder is required for each discharge. Ensign W. L. Dodd, of the Cushing, is assisting in the inspection.

Commander A. S. Crowinshield, recently in command of the St. Mary's, and since attached to the ordnance department at the navy yard, has been ordered to proceed to Key West and relieve Commander Horace Elmer of the command of the corvette Kearsarge. Commander A. H. McCormick is detailed as president of a general court martial, to meet at the navy yard and try any cases that may be brought before it.

NO DEAD MEN FOUND

Between the Covers of the City Directory.

So Says a Gentleman in Speaking of the Central Labor Union's Resolution.

It seems that the Central Labor union has passed a resolution to instruct all union men in the city to give fictitious names to those engaged in compiling the new city directory," said a gentleman this morning. "They have a grievance against the concern that prints the book, but don't you see they are cutting off their noses to spite their faces. If a man's name is left out of the city directory it don't affect anybody on earth but himself and those who would have business with him. It is an advantage to every man to have his name in the directory, and a decided disadvantage not to have it there. A man might as well say, 'I won't live in my house, I'll close it up and go and live in the woodshed. Then if any man wants to find me you bet your life he can hunt.'

"John Jones is a carpenter. A man has work that he can give John Jones, but he don't know where John Jones lives. He will look in the directory and address him a letter, but John Jones is a union man and not in the directory. The man who wants work done don't break his neck looking after John Jones; he hires some one else.

"Wm. Smith is a union man; his name is not in the directory. A long-absent friend happens in the city, has a few hours to spare, thinks he will call on his old friend Wm. Smith, looks in the directory, no Wm. Smith there; friend can't find him. Who's affected? Why, Wm. Smith and his old friend, that's all.

"The union's resolution is a jim-dandy boomerang. No matter how far it reaches out, it will always come back and welt them in the shins.

"The man whose name is in the directory is registered as living; he whose name is not there will be looked for in the great beyond, when the man who wants to see him has time to go there.

"If fictitious names go into the directory there is one dead sure fact, and that is, no one will ever look for them. This new fangled scheme don't affect the printing company in question at all. The only ones in this vale of tears that it does affect are the men who keep their names out."

WANT THEIR OWN COURTS.

Indian Territory Asks Judicial Self-Control.

The Federal Grand Jury Recommends the Establishment of Courts of Complete Jurisdiction.

Ardmore, I. T., March 11.—The federal grand jury in its final report to the United States court in session here contained some important clauses relative to the establishment of courts of complete jurisdiction in the Indian Territory.

The report was ordered printed and copies to be sent to members of congress. This court is considered by the people a pre-eminent success. It is no longer an experiment, it has punished violators of the law and to a great extent suppressed offenses over which it has jurisdiction, and has inspired the people with respect for law and order.

The groundless charge that competent jurors cannot be had in this country, and that convictions of violators of the law cannot be secured is now repeated only by those whose personal interests blind them to the true condition of matters.

The white people residing here are the same character of people who have been the pioneers in the settlement of all the states and territories of the United States, and have reclaimed our entire country from its original wild condition.

The faculty of self-government of the American and the thrift, intelligence, enterprise and love of law and order of the people of this country are reliable guarantees that the people are not only competent to operate home courts with full and complete criminal as well as civil jurisdiction, but they will be found fully equal to any emergency when called upon.

It is a cardinal principle in American government that every community shall be held responsible for the acquittal or conviction of its own criminals, and while the Indian territory is held responsible for the commission of much crime its people have not the necessary means of punishing or preventing the same.

The jurisdiction of the courts at Paris, Tex., and Fort Smith, Ark., deprive the Indian territory courts of the right to punish their violators of the law, and are continuing in violation of the principle of government stated, but do not remove from the shoulders of the people the stigma of violators of the law going unpunished.

Congress owes it to the people to give them the means and then hold them responsible for the punishment of violators of the law. This grand jury has found itself much hampered in its investigations and has spent much time in the investigation of offenses, only to find they were of a character over which the court has no jurisdiction and which the grand jury could not indict.

FOUND FLOATING.

I threw a pebble into the lake;
The pebble was small,
The lake was wide.
But the circling waves, by that pebble made,
Pictured a lesson that will not fade
While men on this earth abide.

I gave of my love to a sorrowing world;
The word was feeble,
The world was wide,
But the love wave met with a sinking bark
Of one who was dying alone in the dark,
And a pean rolled in with the tide.

I reached to heaven for a sinning soul;
My prayer was weak,
But God was strong,
And sins like scarlet were washed and white,
For the soul that grovelled sprang up to the light,
And the weeping became a song.

The Japanese believe in more mythical creatures than any other people on the globe, civilized or savage. A curious incident enlivened the performance at the Colonne afternoon concert at the Chatelet in Paris recently. No sooner had the orchestra struck up the first bars of a symphony by Mlle. Holmes. The woman was placed under arrest by the police.

Though M. Abeille, who fell before Mr. Deacon's revolver, was a knight of the Legion of Honor, the military compliments of that organization were not rendered at his funeral. During the services over his remains the church was thronged with women, many of whom, including not a few members of the half-world, stopped on the steps to discuss in shrill tones the merits of the case. Most of these present showed that they regarded the proceedings as merely the "event of the day" and nothing more.

Java is said to be the region of the globe where it thunders oftenest, having thunderstorms on 97 days in the year. After it are Sumatra, with 86 days; Hindustan, with 56; Borneo, with 54; the Gold Coast, with 52, and Rio de Janeiro, with 51. In Europe, Italy occupies the first place, with 38 days of thunder, while France and Southern Russia have sixteen days, Great Britain and Switzerland seven days, and Norway only four days. Thunder is rare at Cairo, being heard only three days in the year, and is extremely rare in northern Turkestan and the polar regions. The northern limit of the region of thunder storms passes by Cape Ogle, Iceland, Novia Zemble and the coast of the Siberian sea.

BERNHARDT'S GOWNS.

Interesting Chat on Dressing and Dresses.

By the Great Actress Who Is a Reformer.

She Wears No Corset and Her Gowns Hang from the Shoulders—Description of Some of Them.

Madame Sara Bernhardt is in the city to-day, and will present La Tosca at Wheeler's to-night. Much has been written about this great actress, but it is not generally known that she is a dress reformer. Yet such is the case.

The Bee's young lady reporter called upon the madame to-day at her apartments in the hotel, and was most graciously received by the famous artiste. She is very pleasant in her manner and her French accent gives a delightful tone to her speech. She seemed quite willing to talk and gave the Bee quite a dissertation on dress, referring principally to her street and house dresses rather than her stage costumes.

She has always been an artist in dressing, and she knows that beauty can not be produced in dress any more than it can on a canvas, except in the external laws of art, and this is why her results are worth study. That there can be good dressing in which fashion has no voice or influence is hard for the fashion-ridden world to understand, but in the first place Bernhardt has assumed that the Creator can make a more beautiful form than the dress-maker can. This is her ground principle or starting point.

"Whatever you do, dress becomingly," said she. "That is my rule. See what you wear suits you—your person, your individuality. Make your costume to suit you, not yourself to suit the costume. It is wise economy to have one's clothes made by the very best modistes, who are themselves artists in their own special line. But it is not wise to rely upon the uniform judgment of one person or to advocate eternally the skill of a certain few. Now, talent is always making itself felt, and from the individuality of some one who sees you for the first time you may get valuable hints and fresh suggestions.

"It does not take a good costumer long to see and learn just what you need, but if you cling to him monotonously you will always wear the same stamp, like your goddess on the American dollar.

"No garment is permitted to alter or disguise the shape of my figure. The corset I do not wear either on the stage or off; the conventional corseted waist is as far from suggesting the natural form as a wheelbarrow is. In place of a corset I wear either a stitched waist without bones or cords or else two simply stitched bands, one below the other. With ill-made or ordinary skirts and clumsy waists my gowns would be impossible.

"When dress hinders the movement of even one muscle it injures beauty to that extent. This can not be otherwise. No part of my dress is allowed to interfere with the freest movement, and the waist muscles are as much considered as any. This makes possible a kind of beauty which ordinary dress forbids—I mean the beauty of grace. Grace is beauty of motion. You may practice Delsarte till doomsday and it will be of small avail if you persist in a dress that limits movement.

"Again, the construction of my garments obeys absolutely the law of fold-centers. Folds may legitimately be fastened only where by the form of the body they would be naturally gathered together. Wherever the body offers support to the weight of the garment there is a natural fold-center.

"The points furnished by nature for suspending the garments are the shoulders and hips, therefore to attain the maximum of beauty in its hanging the garment must have all the parts depend, or appear to depend, from these two sources, but principally from the shoulders, as they, from their position and form, offer the principal resistance of gravity.

"My dress hangs entirely from the shoulders. The gowns are composed of a yoke to which a skirt is gathered, precisely a child's gown, and confined at the waist with a girdle."

While this chat on the philosophy of dress was being carried on, Madame was showing the reporter a number of her prettiest gowns, and a description of a few of them may be interesting.

A house dress of brown and white hairline stripe shot silk, gathered into a rounded yoke of brown velvet. The skirt is simply hemmed. This slip is confined at the waist with two silver girdles, one of them loose and dropping in front.

A charming gown is entirely of black velvet. The skirt is attached to a heart-shaped yoke. These yokes simply round up to the top of the shoulder instead of ending in the armhole. The yoke and mutton-leg sleeves are embroidered with small stars of gold bullion and thread. The bodice fits close to the bottom of the waist, and is fastened by a lacing behind. It is confined by gold belts.

Another has a skirt of brown velvet. Madame makes great use of velvet. The yoke and sleeves are of silk of a lighter fawn color, and are richly embroidered with gold and silks. It is fastened under the arm. For this gown there is a long tan-colored cloak of soft camels' hair sprinkled over with with tufted flakes of a deeper brown. Also a Russian sable boa and a large hat of tan-colored felt trimmed with black ostrich feathers. The large hat is set somewhat back on the head. Madame wears mostly large hats. She understands that a small hat unless it fits like a cap merely changes the shape of the head, but that a large hat frames the face.

Still another is of soft ottoman silk of a reddish violet color. The yoke and sleeves are of velvet of the same color, richly jeweled in an all over-pattern. It has a high, rolling collar. A band of velvet borders the skirt. To complete this costume is a velvet cloak of the same color, richly bordered with bands of otter; also a hat of black, loaded with violets and pink Castilian roses.

The sleeves of these gowns are of the mutton-leg order, very full at the top and wrinkled along the arm and very long, covering well the wrist. Also the skirts are somewhat long, training somewhat behind, and often so long in front that one wonders how she can walk in them.

Her cloaks also refer their support to the shoulders, and no fitted back seams of hideous convex curves are mapped out upon them. A characteristic one is of black plush, which hangs easily from a yoke of solid passementerie, and is furnished with sleeves that are very full about the shoulder.

It seems to one who has not seen Bernhardt in them that these gowns would appear negligee. They do not in the least. Nothing could be more elegant. Much of this success depends upon the underdressing, which is compact and fine.

It may be of interest in this day of bell skirts to know how madame manages about pockets. She has none in her gown, but if you watch for a little you may see her calmly and deliberately raise her outer skirt and draw out her handkerchief from a pocket in her satin petticoat. Her use of this same dainty handkerchief is worth while noting, by the way. In her fingers it seems to attain nervous force and become a delicate fibrile texture as she touches it lightly to her face and hair and then rolls it up out sight in her palm.

INDIAN RIGHTS.

Congress To Be Asked to Remove Obstacles of Progress.

Chicago, March 11.—Peter S. Stanup, one of the foremost men of the Puyalup reservation, Washington, was in the city last night on his way east to represent the 600 people of what used to be the Puyallup tribe, before congress, in their efforts to secure all the privileges of citizenship.

In 1885 congress distributed the 18,068 acres in the reservation to the 166 heads of families in severalty, and the Indians became citizens, clothed with all the powers and privileges of their white-skinned brethren in Tacoma, only three miles away.

But the patents under which they held their land forbade them to part, sell, mortgage or encumber it, in return for which restriction they were given immunity from taxation and execution, except for personal property.

Since 1886 they have greatly increased the value of their property. They believe, however, that they would be greatly benefited by a removal of the restrictions under the patents and the state legislature of Washington has sanctioned this, but it requires the consent of congress to make the change valid.

BRYAN PERSONALS.

Bryan, O., March 11.—G. B. Gleason and family, of Toledo, were here in attendance at the funeral of Mr. G.'s father.

Mr. Ross Russell is still confined to the house by the la grippe.

The death of Mary Long occurred yesterday at the home of her mother, Mrs. H. C. Long.

Frank Gleason, of LaGrange, Ind., has been here the past week during the illness and death of his father.

Mrs. J. H. Myers, of Toledo, is with her mother, Mrs. P. S. Gleason.

WRENCHED OUT OF SHAPE.

Joints enlarged and contorted by rheumatism are among the penalties for allowing this obstinate malady to gain full headway. Always is it dangerous from its liability to attack the vitals—invariably is it agonizing. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has in nothing more clearly asserted its supremacy to the ordinary remedies for this malady than in its power to expel the rheumatic virus completely from the blood. It is safe, too, while colchicum, veratrum and mineral poisons prescribed for it are not. The efficacy of the Bitters as a cleanser of the circulation is also conspicuously shown where the poison of miasma infects the vital fluid, or where it is contaminated with bile. Constipation, dyspepsia, "la grippe," kidney and bladder trouble, nervousness and debility are also removed by it. The convalescing and the aged and infirm derive much benefit from its use.

Children's Hour

FIVE LITTLE SERVANTS.

The Indian.

I had five little servants, so willing and so gay,
I put them in a cosy house, and there I bade them stay;
But one by one they left me, it made me feel quite sad,
And now the house is empty, for they were all I had.

The first one was an Indian, I guess a Copperhead,
With feathered crest, and waving locks, and face so bright and red;
I took him to a candy shop, one fine sunshiny day,
And brought a stick of candy home, but let my servant stay.

A Copperhead.

The second was an Indian lad, but ugly, fat and dark;
I gave him to the baker's man, who lives out by the park;
Two great big buns I got for him, with currants thick and black,
But now they both are eaten up, I wish I had him back.

The Tiny Fairy.

The third, a tiny fairy, with crown of silver bright,
Sang clink-clink-clink so merrily, from morning until night;
I could not bear to let her go, but then I had to buy
Some marbles for my game one day, so gave her with a sigh.

A Haughty Lady.

The fourth one was a lady with a calm and haughty smile;
I thought how many things she'd buy, and kept her quite a while;
But I dropped her in a "slot," one day, to see what she would do,
And out there tumbled chewing gum, done up in paper blue.

The Little Dude.

The last, a merry little dude, with bright and shining face,
Smiled up at me whene'er I looked to see him in his place;
I never meant to part with him, I really loved him so,
But for an ice-cream soda, at last I let him go.

THE GOLD ROSARY.

"It is your turn now, Rachel," said Jack. "What do you choose?"

"I choose this," said Rachel, turning around from the cabinet and holding one tightly closed hand high above her head.

"Well, what is it, dear?" asked grandma, smiling at Rachel's curiously flushed cheeks and eager eyes.

For answer she threw herself down at grandma's knees and undosed her small brown hand. On her palm lay a beautiful rosary of exquisitely carved gold beads. The crucifix was of gold, too, with some tiny diamonds set as a halo around the head of the agonized Christ.

"Oh, grandma!" exclaimed Jetty, drawing a long breath, "how very lovely it is! Surely that has a history."

"How in the name of goodness did you come by those Catholic fooleries?" demanded Jack gruffly.

But grandma did not answer for a moment. She was looking sadly down at the gleaming circlet on her knee, and when she looked up there were tears in her eyes.

"Yes, it has a history, a sad one, and yet it is such a pretty story I must tell it to you, Jack, dear, don't speak of this or of anything else as 'Catholic fooleries.' Because you are a Protestant, is there no other creed right save yours? It is not the way we worship, but the hearts with which we worship that makes or mars us. The girl who owned this rosary was the truest Christian I ever saw, and she was a Roman Catholic. I have always loved that church since I knew her.

"It was the year I was 19 that father sent me abroad for a trip with Aunt Sophie. We were in Rome at carnival time, and we had a jolly little balcony just big enough for Aunt Sophie and me, all hung with American flags and gay silk streamers. It was I who would have the flags so that all the Americans who passed should look up and salute their flag and their countrymen. Well, they did, and so did everyone else, and we had a lively time of it for many hours, dodging the confetti, catching the lovely nosegays and throwing back flowers, bon-bons and smiles. At last there came a little lull in the gayety and I dropped into a chair behind the drapery for a moment's rest.

"It was then that I saw Isobel. My eyes had wandered to the next balcony and there, in a big chair, lying back luxuriously amid her silken cushions, was a girl about 17, with the loveliest face I had ever seen. Her skin was like a pearl, and sure for a vivid flush in each cheek, it was as colorless. Her hair was black, with deep blue shadows in it, and I could see the long braids hanging clear to the balcony floor. Her eyes were black, too, liquid and soft, and they were looking straight at me with a wistful expression that went straight to my heart. I saluted her merrily and in the same breath I called Aunt Sophie.

"'Poor little thing!' said Aunt Sophie, as she waved her hand in friendly American fashion. 'See how ill she is!'

"'Ill?' said I. 'Nonsense, Aunt Sophie! Look at her cheeks.'

"'That's just where I am looking,' said she, 'and that's just how I know. That color means consumption, and quick consumption at that.'

"'O, the poor darling!' I exclaimed; and then, impulsively, for I was an impulsive girl, just like you, little Rachie, I seized my biggest and loveliest bouquets and threw them straight at her. Just then two servants came to wheel her chair away, and the prettiest remembrance I have of Isobel is seeing her carried away, buried to her chin in blossoms, and hearing her say in her mellow Italian voice and in perfectly distinct English: 'Thank you, thank you, very much!'

"She haunted me in my dreams all night and the next day I was still chattering about her to Aunt Sophie, when the door opened and old Dorothy, our servant, announced some one. We could not catch the name, for almost before Dorothy spoke the lady had walked swiftly down the room and was speaking to us in her delicious English, with its fascinating Italian intonations. We could scarcely understand her at first, but finally we made out she was the lady who lived in the next house, and the mother of the girl I had seen on the balcony. She had come to see us, to know if I would go and visit Isobel, who had taken a fancy to me and wanted to know me. There would be no difficulty. Isobel spoke English perfectly. She had had an English governess all her life. Aunt Sophie should come, too, to make sure there was no harm, and here the lady produced her card. We knew who she was then. She was a very great lady and we had often heard of her. It was all right that I should go, and I was so delighted I could scarcely wait to get my hat before starting. But I walked demurely along beside the contesse, and followed her upstairs to a great, sunny, airy room, where on a low divan, Isobel awaited us. How lovely she looked in her pale blue wrapper, with its fluttering laces and ribbons, and the tiny blue slippers with rosettes that peeped out from the hem of her skirt.

"I have put on my gala day wrapper to welcome you," she said as she put out her hand, "and see, mother mine, how Louisa and I have dressed the room with flowers and flags in compliment to our American friend."

"I glanced around the pretty room and, sure enough, there were flowers in all the vases, and on the walls garlands of green twined with small American flags. She laughed as she looked at my astonished face.

"'It is for a welcome, she said, 'since you are so good to come and comfort me. I get very lonely and I like your face. Now you can run away for your drive, little mother, and know I am all right. Sit down in this low chair and talk with me. But first I must know your name. Mine is Isobel; I was named for an English lady.'

"That was the first of many similar days. As long as Isobel could sit up we used to drive together every afternoon, and she would tell me all sorts of wonderful things about Rome that I had never known. She knew everything, much more than I did, and she was only 17. And she was so thoughtful for every one, so afraid we should tire ourselves for her. At last there came a day when she could no longer go out, when she could not even raise her head from the pillows. After that she used to lie in the little iron bed with its dainty blue draperies, her face always turned toward the west.

"One day coming in I found her so, with this rosary in her hand and her lips moving as if in prayer. I stopped awkwardly, for I did not want to interrupt her, but she turned toward me with a smile and said: "Come here, Kathie, I want to speak to you.' Then she went on.

"'I have never used my rosary before you, for you are a Protestant, and sometimes they do not like the sight of the crucifix, but I have thought about it lately and I have concluded you are different. It matters so little, Kathie, dear, what one's creed is, so long as they try to live rightly. Is it not so? I am a Catholic, of course, and I love my church, but I love also the little Protestant church where you worship, and the good pastor who comes sometimes to see you. I am not going to live much longer—do not protest, dear. I know I am near the end, and I am sure I shall go to meet the good Christ who died for us both. He will not ask me my religion, I know, but if I have done the best I can. Is it not so? This rosary I want you to have, then. Good Father Martina, who baptized me as a baby, gave me this, and I have used it all my life. When I am gone keep it for my sake.'

"How gently she spoke, and I fancied she was dying then, for she had a look on her face like the saints in the old picture galleries. But when I threw myself sobbing at the bedside her smile came back, the look vanished, and she patted my head tenderly as she reproved me for crying. That was the first time she had ever spoken of dying, but after that she often talked about it to me. She was quite willing to go, quite resigned. At the last it came quicker than we expected. I was awakened one night by Aunt Sophie leaning over and shaking me violently.

"'Get up quickly, Katherine,' she said, 'Isobel is dying, and they have sent for you. Hurry, child! There is no time to lose.'

"I jumped up quickly and threw on my clothes, striving to keep back the tears that almost blinded me. It was not long until I was ready, and then Aunt Sophie and I crossed the garden in the darkness with the servant who had come for us. Isobel's room was brilliantly lighted, and there were all her people gathered about her little bed. She was quite conscious, and looked up at Aunt Sophie with a smile.

"'Dear Miss Allyn,' she murmured, and then she looked at me. What a long farewell look it was! The great black eyes seemed to smile and weep at the same time. It was her good-bye to me. Presently I ventured to take one of her hands in mine, and there it remained until she died. She did not speak much and she breathed quietly, but she grew weaker every moment. At last she said, faintly: 'Draw the curtains.' It was Aunt Sophie who heard first, and she passed to the window and drew back the heavy curtains. A bar of crimson flashed in and rested across Isobel's slender hands. Then a bar of gold. It was sunrise. Isobel saw it and smiled. Then she unclasped her hand from mine and lifted the rosary from her pillow.

"'Good-bye, Kathie, darling,' she whispered. Her hand with the gold beads fell into mine. Her head sank back. She was gone, and Aunt Sophie, as she threw open the window to let her soul pass, said solemnly: 'It is well.'"

There were tears in grandma's eyes as she paused. Rachel's head was buried in her arms. Jetty was crying audibly and Jack was sniffling on the verge of tears.

"And that is the story of the gold rosary," she said.—New York Recorder.

Lifting an Elephant.

London has been entertained lately by feats of strength that are certainly remarkable and probably unsurpassed in modern times. First there was a man named Sandow, who was an enormously powerful man; he was succeeded by Sampson, and he in turn by an Irish-American named Sullivan. Curiously, the three names begin with the letter S, which is also the initial of "strength," and of the Greek word for strength (sthenos). Sullivan, the latest comer, is thirty years of age, stands 5 feet 8 1-4 inches in height, and weighs 168 pounds. His appearance presents little that is unusual in the way of muscular development, and his biceps are neither very large nor wonderfully rigid. It is in his neck and jaw that his strength chiefly lies, and the majority of his feats are such as bring this peculiarity into special prominence. At an exhibition given in London, he fastened a chain to a 56-pound weight, and the other end being gripped between his teeth, swung himself round and round until the twirling chain assumed a nearly horizontal line. The feat was repeated with the weight doubled, and as the performer, with both hands to his hips, and using every sinew in his frame, swirled round and round, the audience wondered with anxiety what would happen if one of the links should fly asunder. The most remarkable feat, however, that Sullivan performed was the lifting of an elephant by his teeth. It was a "baby," 'tis true, but it weighed about 1,800 pounds, and was lifted a clear three inches from the ground, its whole weight pendent from the jaw of the man above. Sullivan was not successful in an attempt to break a chain with his arm, having injured this limb on the previous night. He succeeded, however, in proving that his prowess was not entirely confined to feats with his teeth, by lifting a barrel of water, weighing 560 pounds, with the middle finger of his right hand. —Harper's Young People.

BEE HIVE.

Greeting.

Dear Young Friends—It gives me much pleasure to let you know that the Children's Hour will soon be much enlarged and very much improved. There will be more stories, pictures, and the puzzle department will be started. Any of you who have puzzles are invited to send them in. Numerous prizes will soon be offered and we want to hear from all of our friends.

Yours,
PETER BUZZER.

An Industrious Girl.

Dear Mr. Buzzer: As I see letters printed in the Children's Hour I thought I would write a letter, too, and if you print it I will write another. I go to school every day and I love to study. I also take music lessons on my piano, once a week. I have started to piece a worsted quilt and am crocheting some very nice lace for myself. I live in a nice village, which has about 800 inhabitants and in the summer it is a lovely place. We have many stone quarries here from which large quantities of stone are obtained.

Your sincere friend,
ADDIE ENGLEHARDT,
13 years old.

Whitehouse, O.

Winter Sport.

Dear Peter: We have taken this lovely paper for ever so long. The sledding has been splendid this month. Our house is on a hill, and we sled from the front steps away down to the bottom. There is a pond there, where we are learning to skate. One night when we were sledding, we went down on the boys' "bumpers," or "jumpers," those low sleds, you know. We thought we could steer them as well as the boys could, but somehow they ran off the track, and we were left lying in the snow, the sleds still traveling on. But that did not stop us from trying them again. We had several more "headers," and once actually reached the foot of the hill in safety. It must have been a trifle damp, for we have had colds and the "grippe" ever since.

GEORGIE RANSON.

From the Far West.

Mr. Buzzer: I am so glad that the Children's Hour has been started again. I am going to write you a little letter and I hope often to write again. I think your stories are splendid and I read them to my little brother every week. I wish more of the boys and girls would write letters.

Prevalence of Kidney Disease.

The large demand, in this and foreign lands, for BUCHU-PAIBA is the best evidence of its reliability as a remedy in Kidney and Genito-Urinary diseases, affections of the Bladder, &c. The increase in Kidney Complaints in this country in recent years has been arrested to a great extent through the merits of this new remedy BUCHU-PAIBA, which without doubt is the best known treatment for irritation, inflammation and catarrh of the Bladder, and the various diseased Genito-Urinary discharges. It is put up in convenient bottles that sell for $1.00 at Druggists or Chemists, or may be had of the manufacturer, express prepaid, by forwarding $1.00 to E. S. Wells, Jersey City, N. J.

Cockroaches, Ants,

Beetles, water bugs. The most effective and permanent remedy is—for two or three nights to sprinkle ROUGH ON RATS dry powder unmixed, on, in, about and down the sink and drain pipe; scatter it well but thinly all over the sink. First thing in the morning wash it all away down the drain pipe, repeat two or three nights, when all the insects from garret to cellar will disappear. The secret of this is in the fact that wherever the bugs or insects may be during the day, they must go to the sinks for water during the night. They can't stand ROUGH ON RATS in their water. This is the quickest, most effective and satisfactory remedy. ROUGH ON RATS being a poison, it should be used in this way only at night and washed away early in the morning. Another way is to mix a tablespoonful of ROUGH ON RATS with a half pound of brown sugar. Sprinkle it on rear of cupboard shelves or on plates, or on sheets of paper placed high out of reach of children.

NEW BRIDGE

Discussed by the Ways and Means Committee.

Important Action Taken in the Matter.

No Salaries to be Raised—Wabash Street Opening—Street Improvements—Other Committee Business.

A very important meeting of the council committee on ways and means was held in Auditor Walker's office last evening and there was a large lobby of city officials and interested citizens present and indulged in some of the discussions.

Assistant City Solicitor Watts reported on the Wabash street opening and stated that an award of $1,000 had been made to the Clover Leaf railroad, by the common pleas court, but when a tender of the money was made the company refused to accept it and has carried the case up to higher courts. He said that by filing a bond of $5,000, to abide by whatever award is made by the courts, the city can open and improve the street at once.

This matter was discussed at considerable length and Mr. Clarence Brown, representing the railroad company, also participated in the debate. The railroad company is asking for $30,000 damages in this case and some of the members were afraid that the company might be awarded damages to an amount larger than the city could afford to pay for the street and if a bond is given the city would be obliged to stand the award or lose the amount of the bond.

For this reason Mr. Everett moved that action in the matter of opening the street be deferred until the matter is settled in the courts and this motion prevailed.

The amendment to the salary ordinance, increasing the salaries of the assistant city solicitor, the city clerk, the mayor's clerk and the chief of the fire department also caused a long debate.

Mr. Lee was decidedly opposed to raising any of the salaries for the reasons that the city cannot afford to do it and he thought that the officials were already being paid enough for their work. Mr. Caldwell was also of the same opinion and finally on his motion the whole matter was postponed.

City Engineer Wickenden then made the following report on the matter of a bridge across Swan creek, at or near the present Perry street structure:

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Toledo:

Gentlemen: Pursuant to your instructions I have carefully considered the conditions of the means of communication between the southwest end of Summit street and Ottawa street, and the means by which the same may be bettered and respectfully report as follows:

1. By leaving the present structure at Perry street, a bridge might be constructed across the mouth of Swan creek and the bayou at Monroe street, with westerly end of the span at Monroe street and the easterly end at the northerly end of the existing dock which is a part of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway company's grounds. This span would be about 200 feet in length, would require a center pier in the center of the stream with suitable abutments at each end. In addition to constructing the bridge it would be necessary to acquire a right for the bridge landing and to open a street in the railway company's property. The bridge would be used only by traffic going to and from the middle grounds, but would afford no other relief, and I do not regard it as the most desirable plan.

2. Leaving the present structure at Perry street, a bridge might be constructed with its westerly end reaching the foot of Washington street, crossing the creek in a diagonal direction, and having its easterly approach so located that the southerly line would intersect Ottawa street at a point about 40 feet northerly of the angle in said Ottawa street. This construction would require that the channel should be on the westerly side of the creek and would materially add to the difficulties of navigation in the creek. It would be necessary to acquire property for the easterly approach and to make the bridge available for the Summit street traffic: it would be necessary to acquire a large part of the property lying between Washington street and the Burnett house, but owing to the existing conditions it could not be made a desirable route from Summit street to Ottawa street.

3. The plan which in my judgment will offer the best solution to the problem is: Remove the existing bridge at Perry street, change the channel from the westerly to the easterly side of the creek, move the location of the bridge so that its center line at the northwesterly end would be about thirty feet south and its center line on the westerly line. Ottawa street would be about one hundred and twenty feet south of the center line of the present structure. This would require a bridge about one hundred and sixty feet long. The roadway could be thirty-two feet wide, with a sidewalk on each side six feet wide in the clear. This would double the capacity of the roadway of the present bridge and would make the approaches to Summit street and Ottawa street much more convenient than the present arrangement. The center pier of the bridge would be located where the present channel is located, and the new channel could be made ten feet wider than that now in use, besides giving better approaches to the channel than at present.

To make this improvement it will be necessary to acquire several lots in Receiver's addition, the buildings on which are an eyesore. The cost of this improvement, made in a most substantial manner, with necessary retaining walls, approaches, etc., will, I estimate, cost the sum of $75,000, and it would be necessary to have the work constructed between the seasons of navigation, as during its progress it will be impossible to navigate the creek and maintain travel over the present bridge.

The accompanying plan will give a general idea of the location of the proposed improvement and the new channel, as well as the property necessary to be acquired for the same.

Respectfully submitted.

THOS. R. WICKENDEN,
City Civil Engineer.

Mr. Coleman presented a petition containing the signatures of nearly 700 business men of the city, asking the legislature to grant the city permission to issue bridge bonds to the amount of $75,000.

The committee was unanimous in the opinion that this improvement is a necessity and should be made as soon as possible. This improvement will greatly facilitate travel and traffic across the creek at this point and will be a benefit to the whole city.

After Mr. Wickenden had fully explained the plan, the committee on motion of Mr. Caldwell, adopted a resolution asking the legislature to pass an enabling act and they instructed the city solicitor to prepare a proper bill.

Mr. Wickenden also presented a plan for a new bridge at St. Clair street, to cost $30,000, but no action on this was taken by the committee.

* * *

When the business of the ways and means committee was finished a number of other committees held meetings in the council chamber and acted upon considerable business.

The committees on police and claims audited a number of bills and the sidewalk committee adopted resolutions for a number of new sidewalks.

* * *

The street committee held another seance with the quarreling property owners on Oliver street, and the usual factional dispute arose. This time it was over the ordinance to appoint commissioners and providing for the cleaning and care of the street, sidewalk and shade trees.

The committee were evidently tired of listening to the disagreements of the people along this street, and so tabled the ordinance.

In accordance with petitions presented the engineer was instructed to prepare legislation for widening Scottwood and Parkwood avenues from Virginia street to Delaware avenue.

A petition was presented, asking that George street be graded from Locust to Lagrange street, and the engineer was instructed to prepare the proper legislation.

The contract for paving the alley between St. Clair and Superior street, from Jefferson to Madison, with asphalt, was awarded to the Warren-Scharf Asphalt company, for $1,979.40.

The contract for paving Ostrich lane was awarded to Wernert & Son for $1,496.44.

C. W. McKinney was awarded the contract for grading the alley between Cherry and Orange streets, for $300.

A resolution was approved to repair the planking on South street at a cost not to exceed $300.

Ordinances were approved for paving Twenty-Second street, from Monroe street to Woodruff avenue; for paving the alley between Front and First streets; for paving East Broadway from Starr avenue to Woodville street.

* * *

The sewer committee approved the amendments to the sewer ordinance which provides that the total cost of the sewer shall be made in the estimate and no allowance to be made for extra lumber

A resolution was approved for a sewer in the alley between Colburn and Sumner streets.

The clerk was instructed to advertise plans for drainage as a part of the Eighth ward.

* * *

The committee on plats approved ordinances accepting plats of Mulberry street extension; of lot 841, Port Lawrence, and of lots 86, 87, 88, 89, 90 and 97, Stocking's addition.

The gas committee approved ordinances for several new electric lights.

COSTLY OLEOMARGERINE.

A Hicksville Man Pays $9 a Pound For It.

He Settles With Collector Waldorf and Will Ask Congress to Pass a Special Law in His Favor.

J. A. Coburn, of Hicksville, has just paid in to the United States treasury through Collector Waldorf $540 for 60 pounds of oleomargerine, which he bought of Armour & Co., Chicago, a year ago.

The particulars of the case are interesting, as presented in a letter written this morning by Collector Waldorf to Congressman Donovan, who proposes bringing the matter before congress.

Mr. Coburn keeps a grocery in Hicksville, and after buying the stuff discovered through Berdan & Co., of this city, that he would be obliged to pay a tax of $48 a year in order to retail it.

Mr. Coburn, believing the retailing of the counterfeit butter would not pay, disposed of it to a couple of hotel men. This brought him into line as a wholesaler and subjected him to a tax of $360 a year.

The attention of Collector Waldorf was called to the matter, and summoning Mr. Coburn he presented that disgusted gentleman with a bill from Uncle Sam for $540. The direct tax was $360, and 50 per cent. penalty for non-payment of the same.

Mr. Coburn told his story straight, and while the collector had every sympathy, his duty was plain. He gave Mr. Coburn time, and with the assistance of friends the amount was paid a week ago.

Mr. Waldorf advised the victim of the bogus butter to apply to congress for relief, and yesterday the collector had a letter from Congressman Donovan asking for full particulars in the case. These Mr. Waldorf forwarded to Washington this morning with the strongest possible recommendation in favor of an abatement.

Congressman Donovan will introduce a special bill asking relief for Mr. Coburn, and it will be undoubtedly passed.

"SAY, SEND ME UP."

Strange Request Made to Patrolman Maloney

This Morning by a Tramp, Anxious to Go to the Workhouse.

"Say, pardner, kin ye git me sent up to the works or to jail for about 20 days or so?" was the strange request made to Officer Tom Maloney on the corner of St. Clair and Perry streets this morning.

"I'm afraid not," answered Tom, and he then gave the fellow a brief, fatherly lecture.

"Well, I can't get work and I've got no money, and I'm going to get sent up some way. If I can't do it any other way. I'll steal something and then you will be obliged to arrest me."

Finding the officer still unmoved, the fellow crossed the street and deliberately snatched a shirt from off of a rack in front of Stark's second hand store and coolly walked away.

Of course the officer arrested him at once and took him to the station, where he was charged with petit larceny. This man who was so anxious to get behind the bars in a healthy young fellow and gave his name as David Jones and Canada as his home. He was taken into court and there his wish was fulfilled, for he was sentenced to pay a fine of $15, costs and 10 days in the workhouse.

WHEAT AND CORN.

The March Report of Distribution by the Department of Agriculture.

Washington, March 11.—The March report of distribution of wheat and corn by the statistician of the department of agriculture makes the stock of wheat in growers' hands 170,000,000 bushels, or 28 per cent. of the crop; 63,000,000 bushels of spring wheat and 108,000,000 of winter wheat, much of the latter in states which have practically no commercial distribution, but entering into local consumption for bread and seed. This is the largest reserve ever reported, that of the largest previous crop (1884) being 169,000,000 bushels.

The exports from July 1 to March 1 were 164,000,000 bushels, the fall seed 36,000,000 bushels, the consumption apparently 200,000,000 bushels; but a larger proportion is taken for consumption in the fall and winter, and the actual consumption is proportionately greater than in the spring and summer. The assumed consumption from March 1, 1891, to March 1, 1892, is 300,000,000 bushels for a population of 64,300,000; the exports 205,000,000 bushels, the seed 56,000,000 bushels—a distribution of 562,000,000 bushels. With 41,000,000 visible and 171,000,000 invisible stock, there are 27,000,000 bushels not regularly accounted for previously, which came in the unprecedented squeezing of all sorts of reserve, mainly from the always uncounted stocks of flour between mill and mouth and from small uncounted stocks between the farmers' granaries and the visible supply. The average weight of wheat is 58.5 pounds per measured bushel, and which is the estimated weight of the crop of 1887, and is .91 of a pound above the average of eight previous years.

The estimated quantity of corn in farmers' hands is 860,000,000 bushels, or 41.8 per cent of the crop. This is the largest proportion ever reported, that of 1889 excepted, which was 45.9 per cent, or 970,000,000 bushels. The seven principal states have a surplus of 546,000,000 bushels, or 41.5 per cent of their product, against 867,000,000 from the great crop of 1889. The proportion merchantable is the largest ever reported, 88.5 per cent., against 85.7 two years ago. The average of eight previous crops is 82 per cent., and the lowest average 60 per cent for the frosted crop of 1883. The present average farm price of merchantable corn is 39.2 cents per bushel; of unmerchantable, 25.7 cents.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR CLEVELAND'S.

On March 4 the contract for supplying the U. S. army with baking powder, was again awarded to the Cleveland Baking Powder Co. This makes the sixth consecutive order for Cleveland's Baking Powder from the government, and now the proposals specify that baking powder offered must be "in quality equal to Cleveland's."

That is commendation that speaks volumes.

OSBORN AND SPROSS,

Of Toledo, and Three Other Trap Shooters

Will Contest for the Glory of Ohio Against a Strong Team From Illinois.

A great team match has been arranged between Ohio and Illinois trapshooters.

About a month ago Mr. R. O. Heicks, of Chicago, placed in the hands of President Waters, of the Ohio Trapshooters' league, the following challenge:

We herewith challenge you to a match of five men per team, Illinois against Ohio, at 100 blue-rock targets to each man and $50 a corner, to be shot at Dayton, O., April 9. We will leave it to you to shoot any rules which you may name, singles, doubles, unknown angles or rapid firing system.

President Waters accepted the challenge and selected the following team to contest for the glory of the Buckeye state: George C. Osborn and G. A. Spross, of Toledo; W. Scott McDonald, of Dayton; M. C. Stamford, of Townsend, and F. P. Clark, of North Baltimore.

The Ohioans decided that targets of unknown angles would be used.

Illinois has some crack trapshooters, and there is a good deal of speculation as to how the contest will terminate. It will be a great victory for Toledo as well as for Ohio if the Buckeyes come out ahead. The contest is attracting considerable attention throughout the country, and the winning team will probably have to meet teams from other states.

AFTER THE GRIPPE.

The Grippe Responsible for More Deaths after Recovery than During its Course—How to Avoid the Danger.

Grippe, in itself, is bad enough, debilitating enough, but it is the after effects, the slowness of recovery that give it its great danger. In most cases, the person did not have sufficient vitality to rally after the disease itself had passed. The forces of nature were too weak to contend with the debility which the Grippe had left.

It is sad to think how many people have died who might have been saved if nature had been properly assisted and fortified after the Grippe had been driven from the system. Many physicians realized this fact and assisted their patients over the dangerous after effects by bracing up and stimulating their systems. This was, and can be done in but one way, and that is by the steady and moderate use of some pure yet powerful stimulant. There is but one absolutely pure and medicinal stimulant known to the profession and to the public, and that is Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. The most prominent scientists and physicians of the land endorse its purity and value. It is not a new whiskey, it has been before the public for years. It is not a cheap decoction, but a pure distillation. It imparts a tone to the system possible in no other manner and sends the blood coursing through the veins with renewed vigor. It is superior in every respect and however much any unscrupulous druggist or grocer may seek to lead you to believe to the contrary do not be deceived.

REDUCTION TO TOLEDO

In Rates on Steel and Iron Manufactures.

The Officers of the C., J. & M.—Forging C., H. & D. Passes—Other Matters of Interest to Railroaders.

Messrs. Frank Janes, of the Pennsylvania; C. T. Wight, of the B. & O.; Hudson Fitch, of the Ohio Central lines; A. E. Billings, of the Lake Shore, and L. B. Davis, of the Clover Leaf, have returned from Chicago, where they attended the meeting of the freight department of the Central Traffic association.

It was decided to reduce the rates on articles of steel and iron manufacture to Toledo and all points in Ohio.

The reduction is to the fifth class in less than car loads and sixth class in car loads.

This reduction will go into effect March 28. It will be an important change.

The Michigan Central railroad asked for a one cent differential on eastbound business via Detroit and the Cleveland and Detroit Steam Navigation company, to Cleveland. This was denied, as it would be discriminating against Toledo and would have the effect of demoralizing other lake and rail rates.

C., J. & M. Officers.

The new board of directors of the C. J. & M. railroad, given in the Bee yesterday, have elected the following officers: President, Walston H. Brown; vice-president, Frank B. Swayne; and Richard Outwater temporary secretary and treasurer.

There will be no changes in the operation of the road. The present general officers will remain in Toledo and matters will run on the same as usual.

The new directors have nothing to say regarding the matter of the road being leased to the C., H. & D., or at least entering into some close traffic arrangement. Such changes, if any, will develop in the future.

Articles of association consolidating the Michigan & Mackinaw Railway company, of Michigan, and the Cincinnati & Michigan Railway company, of Ohio, as the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw Railway company, have been filed at the secretary of state's office at Lansing, Mich. The new company is capitalized at $16,300,000.

Forging C., H. & D. Passes.

Charles Taylor was arrested yesterday at Sidney, O., on the charge of forging passes over the C., H. & D. railroad. Taylor is 25 years old, a printer by trade, and formerly resided at Cynthiana, Ky. He has resided at Sidney about one year, and as he was out of employment, he resorted to forging passes to raise money and sold them for nominal amounts. He sold one to a traveler who is now in jail at Lima. A telegram says that Taylor admits his guilt. It appears that he has even gone so far as to instruct others how to write passes, and two were recovered from a young man who was not arrested.

AN EXCITED GERMAN

Becomes Frightened and Does Some Shooting.

One Shot Fired at Patrolman Lang and That Officer Has a Narrow Escape.

Three shots fired in a saloon on the corner of Segur avenue and Linden streets last night caused a crowd to congregate about the place and when a rumor started that a man had been killed, great excitement prevailed. Patrolman Lang was attracted to the place and upon being informed of what had happened, at once demanded admittance. A man answered him from the inside, but refused to open the door.

The officer then burst it in, but he had no sooner done so than the man inside fired one shot at him and attempted to shoot again, but the revolver missed fire and in an instant the officer had overpowered him and taken the weapon away.

The man who did the shooting was a young German, and he was very much excited. It was soon evident that he had no malicious designs on the policeman, but did not know what he was doing. He said that he had seen men prowling around the place during the night and had fired upon them through the window. This is what caused the excitement and when the officer burst the door open the young German mistook him for some of those whom he said had been tormenting him and so fired. It was a very close call for the officer as the shooting was at short range and the bullet barely missed him.

DO YOU WANT GOLD?
Cripple Creek is not a health resort. It is a wealth resort. Quite a difference! Location, near Pike's Peak, in Colorado. Gold—bright, yellow gold, is found at grass roots and in the rock formation.
Reliable experts claim this is to-day the richest camp in Colorado. Assays average $100 per ton, and have run as high as $5,000. One hundred people a day are now rushing to Fremont, chief town of the district.
The chance of a life-time is worth looking after!

Many eastern drug stores have adopted the precautionary measure of having two persons attend the preparation of any prescription containing poisonous drugs. The Medical Record calls attention to the Harris murder trial in New York as an illustration of the importance of this check, because "if a single clerk received the prescription, prepared the capsules and delivered them, it might readily have been claimed by the defense that a mistake had been made by the druggist. As it was, the druggist was able to go on the stand and testify that an assistant had also read the prescription and seen the amount of morphine which it called for properly weighed and dispensed."

Sara Bernhardt in La Tosca To-night.

The New Melodrama "Fire Patrol"—"O'Dowd's Neighbors"—Return Engagement of Donnelly and Girard.

Probably no actress to-day is so famous as "La Bernhardt." From Russia to Australia, through all countries she has triumphed through sheer force of genius. Eccentric almost beyond belief, she is always a thorough artist, and her impersonations have in them a strength that must be seen to be realized. In fashionable circles she is the favorite artist, not only because of her talent as an actress but because of her exquisite taste in dress. Sara Bernhardt has probably set more fashions than any other woman living, and is to-day not only the greatest actress in the world, but also the most tasteful dresser on the stage.

The Fire Patrol.

The New York World speaks as follows of the Fire Patrol, which will be at the People's all of next week:

"A new play entitled The Fire Patrol delighted a large audience at the Windsor theater last night. It was bright, lively, has a good plot which is well told and should be a success with lovers of melodrama. A scene showing the interior of a Colorado crushing mill and one showing Union Square on Christmas eve were very effective."

O'Dowd's Neighbors.

This play is a roaring farce comedy of the funniest kind and serves well to show the comical eccentricities of Mark Murphy as the inimitable O'Dowd. This comedy has also had the doubtful honor of being transformed into a half dime novel. The comedy will be presented at Wheeler's Monday evening.

Natural Gas.

The return of Natural Gas which has been expected for some time, is announced for Wednesday, March 16th, at Wheeler's. Donnelly and Girard are yet the bright particular stars of the organization, and Manager Samuel P. Cox has surrounded them with a very strong company, in fact a perfect galaxy of stars, among whom are Miss May Howard, who left her own company—The May Howard Burlesque Co., in order to join Natural Gas. The amusing play has also been altered somewhat, in order to "let in" some very pretty original songs and dances, and all the clever things a half dozen brainworkers have been concocting.

THEY NEVER FAIL.

J. N. Harris, 3 Fulton Market, New York city, says:

"I have been using Brandreth's Pills for the last fifteen years. There is nothing equal to them as blood purifiers and liver regulators. But I wish to state how remarkably they cure rheumatism, and how easily; I was affected by rheumatism in the legs. My business (wholesale fish dealer) naturally leads me to damp places. I could not walk, and at night I suffered fearfully; I tried balsams, sarsaparillas, and all kinds of tinctures, but they did me no good and I was afraid of being a cripple. I finally commenced using Brandreth's Pills. I took two every night for ten nights, then I began to improve. I continued taking them for forty days and I got entirely well. Now, whenever sick, I take Brandreth's Pills. They never fail."

A MEAN TRICK.

"Say," remarked Dusty Bob, as he bore down upon Blue Chip Cronin and some more of the boys at the Brower house corner yesterday afternoon, "has any of you ducks seen Cap Connors?"

"What's up, Dusty?" queried Cronin; "are you lookin' for to do him?"

"Do him! Butcher life. He did me low down last night and when I get a sight of him again he won't be deuce high. I was up to Dink Davis' early in the evenin' a-playin' bank, and before all me stuff was gone I switched over and gave the wheel a roll. Cap has been a-hittin' her up to the queen's taste and he had a stack big enuf to pave a block. Why, if that feller had put a strawberry up for a chip he wouldn't a-stopped till he win a shortcake.

"I soon see they wasn't rollin' my way, and just when Cap was a-dashin' in me last blue was scooped on red and even. He had a wad like an army blanket and just as he was goin' out I say: 'Say, Cap, kin ye spare me one bone what I give ye last Monday for a policy gig?' He says, 'Cert, Dusty,' and hands me a silver dollar. 'Thanks,' says I, and he goes out. I grabbed me rabbit's foot in me left hand and dropped me lonely case on the double nought. It came.

"'Gimme bills 'stead of chips,' I says, and I had me hand on the roll when the spinner looks sorter close at Cap's dollar. 'Say, Dusty,' he says, 'that's a plugged bone and it don't go, see?' and he takes back the roll.

"I've been a-carryin' the banner all night," sighed Robert, in conclusion, "and when me and Cap meets there'll be a boom in the mournin' goods business.
